Clark pledges power to provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark's new Conservative government pledged today to give more power to the provinces, promote individual initiative and restore "growth, confidence and jobs to the Canadian economy."

In the policy-previewing speech from the throne, written by Clark and read by Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer at the opening of the 31st Parliament, Clark promised "a new era in federal-provincial relations" — in which consultation would be the hallmark — and immediate action to deal with the troubled economy.

"My ministers believe the greatest immediate challenge facing Canada today is to restore growth, confidence and jobs to the Canadian economy," said the throne speech.

Clark promised a five-part economic strategy that would include getting government spending under control, co-operation with labor and business to encourage growth of the private sector, more job-creation programs, improved regional transportation and actions to ensure the country is self-sufficient in energy by 1990.

The speech was largely a repetition of promises made by Clark during the May 22 election campaign and pointed to about two dozen separate pieces of planned legislation. But a campaign promise of $2 billion in personal income-tax cuts was not mentioned.

The speech was strong on the themes that Clark developed while in opposition — more rights for the provinces, more power for individual members of the Commons and greater public access to government information.

"My ministers were given a mandate to change the direction of the government of Canada," the speech said.

"The basic purposes of that change will be to enhance the rights, freedoms and opportunities of individual Canadians, and re-establish the spirit of partnership and renewal which are fundamental to our federation."

The speech observed that the Clark government had already handed the provinces lotteries and that coastal provinces had been given jurisdiction over offshore resources.

But the provinces will also be given a greater say in development of telecommunications policy and will take part with business and labor in a National Economic Development Conference at an unspecified date.

Measures will stimulate energy development and distribution to attain energy self-sufficiency. But the government "accepts and respects provincial jurisdiction over resources as it accepts its own responsibility to ensure economic stability, competitive advantage and other national objectives."

As expected, the government promised freedom-of-information legislation permit public access to the vast storehouse of material within the federal bureaucracy. Limitations on release of secret material would be specific and any dispute over access would be "resolved independently of the government."

Bank prime to record 13¾%

Expected to rise to 15% by year-end

Canadian banks today raised their prime lending rates to 13.75 per cent, up three-quarters of a point, and further increases seemed certain.

They were reacting to a Bank of Canada announcement this morning that its rate had gone up three-quarters of a point to a record 13 per cent. Increases by the chartered banks are virtually automatic.

The Royal Bank has already raised its prime rate to 14.75 per cent in the United States, although it was holding to 13.75 per cent in Canada, at least for today.

A spokesman for the bank said the Canadian prime rate could be in the range of 15 to 15.5 per cent by Christmas.

The Canadian hikes are in tandem with those in the U.S. where the huge Chase Manhattan bank today increased its prime rate to 14.5 per cent.

The rate increases in both countries are designed to protect Canadian and American currencies, under attack because of the rising price of gold.

The Royal today said it will increase the rate it pays customers for pure savings accounts to 10.75 per cent retroactive to Oct. 1 and to 11 per cent on Nov. 1.

All rates are all-time records.

Other banks today announced increases to 13.75 per cent for their prime rates and other rates are also expected to increase to approximately those offered or charged by the Royal.

The mortgage rate is holding at 13 per cent but is under pressure for a further increase.

The 10.25 per cent interest rate offered on Canada Savings Bonds almost certainly would have to be increased, bank spokesmen said.

The Canadian interest rate increases were triggered by an announcement by Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada that he must raise the central bank's lending rate three-quarters of a point to a record 13 per cent, although he is aware the high level of interest rates in the country is hurting individuals and businesses.

The rate was raised to 12.25 per cent on Sept. 10.

This is the second bank-rate increase in less than a month and the third since the Jobless decline, but not in B.C.

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of those unable to find work fell for the sixth consecutive month in September to 719,000 from 772,000 in August.

This reduced the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate to a three-year low of 7.1 per cent, Statistics Canada reported today.

However, British Columbia's unemployment rate rose last month to 7.7 per cent from 7.4 per cent in August.

And, despite steady improvement in the jobless situation since early spring, Canada's unemployment rate remains higher than most others in the industrialized world.

Latest available figures show 6-per-cent unemployment in the United States and Australia, 5.3 per cent in Britain, 3.7 per cent in West Germany and two per cent in Japan.

The last time the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate, the government's usual indicator of the seriousness of unemployment, fell to 7.1 per cent was in September, 1976.

Seasonal adjustment means the rate compensates for predictable seasonal fluctuations in the job situation such as the beginning of the school year or freeze-up.

The number with jobs in September was 10.53 million compared with 10.91 million in August. The drop reflected primarily the removal of student workers from the job force with the end of summer vacations.

Socred researcher quits over 'lettergate' scandal

By PAUL NICHOLSON

Socred caucus chairman Jack Kempf today accepted the resignation of the caucus' chief researcher Jack Kelly over what has been dubbed the "lettergate campaign."

The move came as something of a surprise because Kempf has supported Kelly throughout his investigation into the use of "dirty tricks" to manipulate the media to promote Social Credit.

Kempf, MLA for Omineca, cut short a fishing trip to meet Kelly today in Victoria.

Kempf said his investigation proved that some of the charges attributed to the research staff were proved to be true.

He said in light of that he had no alternative but to accept Kelly's resignation.

He added, however, that at this point he's not calling for any further resignations.

Kempf said he's convinced that Kelly didn't mean to suggest any illegal practices should be used to get Socreds elected, but since that's the way it came out Kelly had to leave.

He repeated earlier statements that the party does not condone the practices Kelly suggested to party workers at an Esquimalt-Port Renfrew Social Credit Association meeting, such as using phoney names on letters to the editor of newspapers.

In his letter of resignation, Kelly said his statements had been misconstrued but since the negative publicity put the party and the caucus in a bad light, he had no option but to tender his resignation.

Ferry came too fast out of fog – boater

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The ferry that ran down a Sidney couple's wooden cruiser Saturday emerged from a fogbank too fast to manoeuvre in the eastern entrance to Active Pass, the boat owner said today.

Brien Baker, 8549 Lochside, said he and his wife Wilma were heading out of the pass and decided to turn back when they saw the fog. Baker was at the controls of their twin-inboard Chris-Craft and was in radio contact with another vessel when his wife saw the Queen of Sidney bearing down on their stern about a ship's length away.

Visibility was about 500-600 feet, Baker said.

"We were going in the same direction. They came out of the fog and unfortunately we didn't hear or see them until they were right on top of us," Baker said.

The cruiser was travelling about half-speed at 10 knots.

He said the ship caught the cruiser broad along the starboard side, trapping the cabin and control area under the overhang.

"It dragged us down three quarters the length of the ferry," Baker said.

The craft disengaged only when Baker cut power to one of his engines, leaving the top of the boat a crumpled tangle.

Baker stayed at the controls but his wife was almost thrown out as the boat tipped to a 45 degree angle. Her hand was cut as she struggled to hang on.

"She was a real trouper. She got right below and got the life jackets," Baker said. But she has not slept for three nights since, he added.

Baker said he thought the ferry was "going too fast to miss us."

The captain could not manoeuvre to starboard because he was too close to shore, and if he had turned to port he would have struck the cruiser broadside - "he would have killed us," Baker said.

The entire superstructure of the boat was sheared away, taking control panel, windows, cabin, cockpit rail and stoving in the dinghy.

Baker has started proceedings against the ferry corporation.

Swearing sentence 6 years?

ISTANBUL (Reuter) — A 41-year-old British woman is being held in Turkey for swearing at airline officials at Istanbul airport after she and her two teenage sons were crowded out of their reserved flight home to London, sources said today.

Mrs. Abide Mehmet, a Londoner of Cypriot origin, has been in Istanbul's notorious Sagmalcilar Prison for more than a month without being charged. She faces up to six years in jail if convicted, the sources said.

She was part of a group of more than 30 Britons turfed off Turkish Airlines flight from Istanbul to London.

Mehmet is expected to be charged with insulting the Turkish nation.

Ferry strikes to continue

Rotating ferry strikes will continue until a contract is signed, union president Shirley Mathieson said today.

Resumption of talks today with mediator Fred Geddes will not interfere with the walkouts, she said.

The union closed the Deas ferry maintenance dock in Richmond today and have announced targets for the rest of the week.

The are:

Wednesday: The B.C. Ferries head office in Victoria, the Vancouver ferry information service and the ferry run linking the Lower Mainland with Powell River.

Thursday: Ferry service from Horseshoe Bay, Nanaimo and Langdale terminals.

Friday: Ferry service from Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen.

Mathieson said reports of a full-scale walkout by the union are erroneous. She said two rebel members at Horseshoe Bay have been phoning Vancouver radio stations alleging that a full-scale walkout is imminent.

"We have no plans for a full strike at this time. We will continue rotating strikes until a contract is signed."

A real bombshell

In Fort McMurray in northern Alberta, Frank and Marie Culleton's biggest problem — besides the weather — was bears in the back yard.

After moving here in August, they have a new worry in their yard at 2273 Dalhousie — artillery projectiles.

Mrs. Culleton was planting bulbs around an old pear tree on Sunday when her hoe struck a metal object.

She dug around a bit more and came up with a badly-rusted, foot-long projectile.

"I realized right away what it was," she said today.

She first thought it was just a souvenir a previous owner had left.

"But then I began to remember all the horror stories in England of people digging up things and leaving them about with sometimes disastrous results."

She called Oak Bay police. They took one look and alerted the Armed Forces bomb squad.

The squad members identified the projectile as a 12-pounder, probably of First World War vintage. It was harmless because the casing containing the explosives was long gone.

The bomb squad carted it away, and was to return with detectors to sweep the garden for any more strange objects.

UN girds for Castro visit

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — U.S. and United Nations authorities are facing a security nightmare after threats to kill Cuban President Fidel Castro during his first visit to the United Nations in 19 years.

Senior officials are planning a massive police operation to ensure Castro's safety when he arrives Wednesday. Sources said an advance guard of Cuban security agents is already in New York.

UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim will review security plans with his aides who held day-long consultations Sunday with the U.S. Secret Service, the FBI and the New York police.

Several threats on Castro's life have been reported and Waldheim may order the UN headquarters sealed off for the visit, with only persons holding official passes permitted to enter.

It has not been announced where the Cuban president will stay in New York or when he will address the General Assembly.

Thousands of Cuban exiles demonstrated outside the UN last week against the Castro government and are expected to return when Castro makes his speech.

It will be the Cuban president's first visit since he took part in the 1960 summit session of the General Assembly when Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev amazed delegates by banging on his desk with his shoe.

Castro's last visit turned into a protocol shambles so far as UN and U.S. officials were concerned. The Cuban leader made a 4½-hour speech which is still a UN record and was involved in arguments with New York hotels.

On this occasion, Castro is to address the General Assembly both as head of state and as chairman of the non-aligned movement which held a summit in Havana last month.

The announcement of Castro's plans has caused surprise because only last week UN officials said the Cubans had informed them he was not expected to address the United Nations.

Some sources said he might have decided to make the trip to bolster Cuba's bid to be voted on to the Security Council. A secret ballot for a vacancy on the council is expected later this month.

Officials believe the security problems involved in ensuring the Cuban leader's safety equal or even surpass those attending the UN visit five years ago of PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

Tens of thousands of violently anti-Castro Cubans, some of them grouped in extremist organizations, live in the New York area. In television interviews some of these have said the Cuban leader should be assassinated.

Arafat, who addressed the assembly in November, 1974, flew to New York unannounced and was flown by helicopter before dawn from Kennedy International Airport to the UN grounds.

After spending the day at the headquarters, he was whisked away during the night.

Up-in-air writer evacuates UN

NEW YORK (AP) — A disgruntled writer circled the United Nations area of Manhattan in a single-engined plane for nearly four hours today, then landed at LaGuardia Airport as his fuel was running out. Thousands had fled the UN headquarters and the nearby building housing the man's publisher.

UN officials had said they ordered the evacuation because the man was threatening to crash into the UN building. However, police said the pilot had not threatened to crash the aircraft and that he had been "very pleasant" in his conversations on the radio.

Police said the pilot, identified as Robert Boudin, agreed to land when told that his publisher from the Harcourt Brace Jovanovich publishing company would meet him at the airport.

A statement read anonymously to the New York Post newspaper earlier and claiming to be from Boudin, said: "When I think of the way I've been lied to by this firm and how they wasted three years of my work because it happened to suit their budget way of doing things, I must admit to thoughts of flying straight in through their executive suite windows."

Bells sounded throughout the 48-storey UN Secretariat building about 11 a.m. and security officers ordered the several thousand employees to leave, as the red-and-white Cessna 172 made large sweeping circles north of the UN complex.

Deaths charged to pilot

ATHENS (UPI) — Manslaughter charges were filed today against the pilot of the Swissair DC-8 that crashed and caught fire at Athens airport Sunday, killing 14 passengers.

A spokesman for the public prosecutor said Capt. Fritz Schmutz, 45, a Swissair pilot for 18 years, would face charges of manslaughter by negligence, causing serious bodily injuries, and obstructing air communications.

Fire gutted the DC-8 cabin after it skidded off the rain-slicked runway on landing.

The pilot blamed surface conditions on the runway, but civil aviation sources said the plane had touched down almost halfway along the tarmac, "several hundred yards too far down for a safe landing."

Mexico, Kuwait hike oil

Both Mexico and Kuwait raised their oil prices today, Mexico by eight per cent to $24.60 a barrel and Kuwait by 10 per cent to $21.43 a barrel.

Mexico does not sell oil on the spot market and does not belong to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, but keeps its prices in line with those of OPEC. The international oil cartel's official price range now ranges from $18.00 to $23.50.

The government oil monopoly Pemex negotiates with each customer on a quarterly basis and the new price is retroactive to Oct. 1.

Mexico's price was $14.10 a barrel in January, rising to $17.19 in March and $22.60 in July.

Mexico sells about 440,000 barrels a day to the U.S. — its main customer — out of a total of 530,000 barrels daily in exports. The rest goes to Spain, Israel and some Latin American countries. European and Asian customers will begin receiving shipments next year.

Mexico also will begin exporting 300,000 cubic feet of natural gas daily to the U.S. next year, at $3.625 per thousand cubic feet.

President Jose Lopez Portillo announced Sept. 1 that Mexico has 45 billion barrels of proven reserves of oil and natural gas equivalent. Estimates of its potential reserves range up to 200 billion barrels.

The Kuwait increase is retroactive to Oct. 1 and Kuwait's oil clients have already been informed, officials said.

Kuwait, which produces an estimated two million barrels a day, had been charging $19.49.

The new Kuwait price still remains under the ceiling of $23.50 a barrel set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Some of the major buyers affected by the increase are Gulf Oil Co., British Petroleum and Shell.

Oil industry sources believe the Kuwaiti increase coupled with the Mexican increase will inevitably result in an across-the-board increase by all producers.

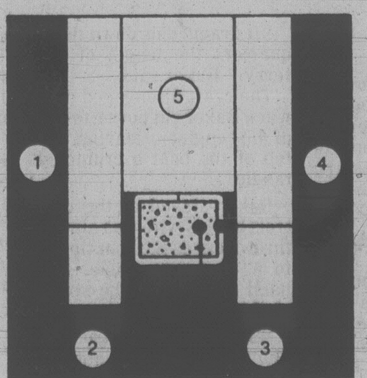
THERMOPANE INSULATING UNITS

Thermopane insulating glass as manufactured by Bogardus, Wilson is a factory-fabricated unit composed of two or more lights of glass separated by a sealed air space.

The primary function of Thermopane is to reduce air-to-air heat transfer which, in turn, contributes to personal comfort, conserves energy, reduces operating costs and minimizes surface moisture condensation during cold weather.

Organically bonded Thermopane units utilize a double-seal construction system carefully fabricated by using a hollow metal separator filled with a desiccant material to absorb moisture.



1. Primary sealant has extremely low permeability.
2. Secondary sealant and bond gives added sealing between glass and separator and permanently bonds the unit.
3. Desiccant is scientifically measured to remove moisture trapped in the air space when the unit is assembled and provide trouble-free service for the life of the unit.
4. Metal separator is rigid, highgrade steel, precision shaped to give even bonding and is also soldered at the corners for lasting strength.
5. The airspace is normally ¼" or ½" in both double and triple Thermopane units.

Appraiser wants land deal probe

CHILLIWACK (CP) — An appraiser who evaluated land expropriated from a former Chilliwack alderman and his partner says he wants to know why council in this Fraser Valley community paid more for it than he said it was worth.

Appraiser Dave Wilson said he has sent a copy of his appraisal for the township to the municipal affairs ministry for investigation.

The 8.5 acres was expropriated from former alderman Tom Branson and his partner Gordon Buchanan for $526,075 in May, 1978. The township also paid their real estate commission and gave them interest and penalty payments, making the taxpayers' cost almost $534,000.

Wilson had appraised the land at $430,000 in January, 1978.

Mayor Ken Kiernan, a former Social Credit cabinet minister, said the municipality paid more than the appraised value because the evaluation was outdated and other payments were necessary to complete the deal. Wilson said the claim that the appraisal was outdated is ridiculous.

Kiernan said in expropriating the land that it was needed for a public works yard, police building, school bus depot and fireman training facility.

The land is among 11 acres Branson and Buchanan bought in 1972 for $176,000. They subdivided it, intending to build separate car dealerships.

After Buchanan put aside about an acre for future business expansion, they put the remaining land up for sale for $621,000. The sale price was to include a $100,000 road built by them, but the municipality bought the property without the road.

Chilliwhack began expropriation procedures of 8.5 acres in 1978, the last year of Branson's aldermanic term.

The partners' real estate fees of $7,500 and an extra $10,553 in penalty payments were carried by the township because Kiernan said he was worried they might cancel the deal when it was delayed.

Complicating the expropriation settlement was Buchanan's lease of a 1.4-acre parcel of municipally-owned land next to his dealership.

Kiernan said that during negotiations it was made clear that if Buchanan did not get this adjoining acreage to safeguard his business, he would resist expropriation and force the matter to arbitration.

Chilliwack put the land on the market for $155,000 and Buchanan made a deposit on the property which council accepted the next day. Buchanan received $119,935 for his portion of the expropriated land and paid $155,000 for the municipal land.

The muncipality also decided it needed a 7.6-metre strip off the bottom of Buchanan's car dealership to keep the lot lines tidy.

Buchanan said he was told to get the mortages removed from this strip and $55,000 would be kept back from the settlement until he did.

When the deal was completed, Buchanan received the $119,935 -including the $55,000 — in the deal. However, he said the municipality never actually bought a sixth of an acre for $55,000.

Kiernan backed the contention and later put his job and $20,000 on the line to prove council hadn't paid $55,000 for the strip.

Council critic Tom Knowles contended council had paid the amount and demanded an explanation. He produced a registered deed showing the municipality had in fact paid Buchanan $55,000.

Kiernan did not produce $20,000.

Sure cure but it isn't practical

VANCOUVER (CP) — The only sure-fire way to eradicate gonorrhoea in British Columbia would be total abstinence from sexual relations by everyone in the province for a week, says a spokesman for the health ministry's venereal disease division.

Until a vaccine is invented, Ron LaBonte says universal abstinence for a week would be the only solution, an impractical scheme that points out the problem health officials are up against.

"To eliminate gonorrhoea everybody in B.C. would have to come into a health unit on the same day and get a dose of penicillin, then come back a week later to check for treatment failures," he said, adding that everyone would have to abstain in the meantime.

LaBonte thinks an advertising campaign launched 2½ years ago is beginning to cause a drop in the incidence of gonorrhoea. B.C.'s gonnorhoea rate dropped at twice the national rate in 1978. It fell by 9.3 per cent to 355 cases for each 100,000 people from 389 the year before. The national rate dropped by 4.5 per cent in 1978.

Air discounts violate rights?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A North Vancouver woman is challenging Air Canada's policy of giving discount fares to married couples while denying discounts to other adults travelling in pairs.

Nancy Bain says she believes the family discount plan violates the Canadian Human Rights Act which prohibits discrimination on the basis of marital status.

The matter now is before the human rights commission in Ottawa.

Ms. Bain said that Air Canada reservation clerks told her couples have to be married or be able to prove they have been living together for at least two years to qualify for the discount.

Under the plan, one spouse pays the full air fare and the other flies for two-thirds of the fare. Children accompanying their parents also are eligible for discounts.

Ms. Bain said she thinks the airline should either abolish the discount or change it to a group plan for which any adults travelling together would be eligible.

"If they were to change it to apply to any man and woman travelling together then it would not be a family plan, and they would be discriminating on the basis of sex," she said.

Ms. Bain said she first made her complaint about a year and a half ago but the commission did not inform her until last August that it would proceed with the complaint.

A spokesman for the commission told her recently that the matter will be put before the commission for a decision at its Oct. 15 meeting, she said.

Commission spokesman Linda Poirier said there was a delay in dealing with the complaint because the commission had undertaken research on the question of marital status and it was thought the research would have a bearing on Ms. Bain's case. However, it turned out the research was not relevant, she said.

Plea made for 800 in Russia

VANCOUVER (CP) — While Pentecostals rejoiced and sang inside the Pacific Coliseum, Arkady Polischuk held a peaceful demonstration outside to bring attention to persecuted believers in the Soviet Union.

Polishchuk, who said he was thrown out of the Soviet Union two years ago for aiding dissidents and now lives in New York City, said he came to the 12th Pentecostal World Conference, which ended here Sunday, with a written plea from more than 800 Pentecostals who want to leave the Soviet Union.

He and 20 supporters, who fasted and demonstrated during the six days of the conference, said they wanted the conference committee to allow the reading of a statement recognizing and supporting the plight of 30,000 Pentecostals in the Soviet Union.

A conference spokesman said Polishchuk's statement was not endorsed because his credibility was questioned.

No special Twin Otter problem found

VANCOUVER (CP) — A preliminary review of the de Havilland Twin Otter's record worldwide fails to indicate any specific problems with the aircraft, Don Button of the federal aviation safety bureau says.

The bureau decided to review the Canadian-built plane's record after a West Coast Air Services Ltd. Twin Otter crashed at Sechelt a week ago Sunday, claiming two lives.

Button said the Twin Otter is operated in many conditions throughout the world, such as in bush and on unprepared landing strips.

"It's one of the few planes that can be operated in these conditions and it appears to be the type of conditions and the type of operations being conducted (that influence the Twin Otter's safety record) rather than the aircraft itself," Button said.

Between Jan. 1, 1976, and Oct. 1, 1979, he said, there were 27 accidents in Canada involving Twin Otters. Eight of those were fatal and a total of 36 persons were killed.

Button said he has ordered an in-depth computer analysis of the Twin Otter's record, but that he has not discovered any particular problem or trend during his own investigation.

The plane makes a lot of money in the export market and is much sought-after for operations in undeveloped areas such as Africa, he said.

One of the causes of Twin Otter fatalities that has nothing to do with the plane's airworthiness, he said, is "people keep walking into propellers."

Crossbar kills goaltender

CHILLIWACK (CP) — A 22-year-old soccer goaltender was killed Sunday when the crossbar of the goal collapsed on him.

Larry Allen Reaume, goaltender for the Surrey Juggernauts Blues soccer team, was swinging from the crossbar while trying to hang goal netting when the goal collapsed.

Reaume, from Surrey, was pronounced dead at Chilliwack General Hospital. The accident occurred on a playing field at the Squiala Indian Reserve.

Injured climber rescued

SQUAMISH (CP) — An injured hiker who spent the night 600 metres up a cold mountainside awaiting rescue is safe at home with a broken leg to show for the experience.

RCMP said Geoff Jones, 22, of Vancouver was hiking Saturday near Shannon Falls, about 45 kilometres north of Vancouver, when he broke his leg in a 10-metre fall.

A helicopter located Jones about mid-day Sunday. Rescuers were lowered the ground and carried him out of the area.

Herring pact vote Friday

VANCOUVER (CP) — Herring food workers are to vote Friday on a tentative contract reached last week with the Fisheries Assocation of British Columbia.

Bill Procopation, spokesman for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said the one-year contract would give the 150 workers $115 a ton for handling food herring or $139 a ton if more than 60 per cent of the catch is more than 20 centimetres in length.

Another campaign promise

Joe Clark continues to sacrifice wisdom in favor of what he must feel is integrity. Yet another campaign promise is being pursued — one that if it comes to pass will allow RCMP security forces to receive government sanction to break the law.

Prior to the May 22 election which brought the Conservatives to power, Clark told an audience in Regina that it is sometimes necessary for those responsible for national security to act in ways not open to the ordinary citizen. He said his government would establish a legal framework so that any extrordinary action by the security services must be approved in advance by a responsible minister of the government.

Now a spokesman for Clark says the solicitor-general's office is exploring the means to accomplish this.

Ironically, this piece of information was revealed the day after the Canadian Civil Liberties Association and the Canadian Bar Association submitted briefs to the McDonald Commission recommending the opposite.

The Bar Association urged the government to ensure that the RCMP obey not only the letter, but also the spirit of all laws. "In no circumstances may the individual or the rule of the law be sacrificed on the altar of national interest," the lawyers' group went on to say.

The Civil Liberties Association suggested that Canadian law has for too long been characterized by a reverence for order against individual freedom. It has recommended sweeping changes to the Official Secrets Acts, Emergency Powers Acts and the War Measures Acts in relation to the RCMP's power to suspend individual liberty.

There is no justification for Clark to be in hot pursuit of special avenues to allow security forces to contravene the law. To suggest that a minister of the government will be able to decide impartially whether 'special procedures' are advisable is rubbish. How many sides of the story will he or she be told before sanctioning covert operations?

The law exists not only to preserve the state, but also to protect the individual from the state's authority. If the state doesn't feel it doesn't have enough power, then adequate law through due process should be publicly debated and enacted. To give one official, a person Clark says would be responsible to parliament, discretionary power enabling security forces to break the law would be open to abuse that in the worst circumstances could border on tyranny.

The government is expected to introduce early next year revisions to the Official Secrets Act and establish the new ground rules for security operations. Clark would be acting wisely to wait until the recommendations of the McDonald Commission are on his desk before making any bold moves to revamp the emergency measures acts.

Getting in a lick

It's fitting that the Alert Bay Village council should get the last say over the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce pulling up stakes from the town.

The Imperial quit the remote village on northern Vancouver Island last month after stating the Alert Bay branch was a money loser. The 1,600 residents were left without any banking facilities with the exception of the limited services of a local credit union.

Village fathers and town merchants teemed with indignation over the prospects of having to take a 16-kilometer ferry ride to banking facilities at Port Hardy or Port McNeill. They couldn't understand why the bank, gave them only one month's notice before pulling out. It wasn't enough time, they said, to interest another charter bank in locating in Port Hardy.

But then, to add insult to injury, the Imperial asked city council to rebate a suitable proportion of its annual $100 business tax.

Village council told the giant corporation where to go. Councillors no doubt took the $33 rebate the bank believes it is entitled to, and deposited it in a credit union savings account.

Lower entry fees

For the homeowner, initiation dues for the conserver society are expensive.

Six inches of insulation for a 1,000 square foot ceiling runs between $200 and $300. Woodburning fireplaces and stoves that produce enough heat warm two or three rooms range anywhere from $200 to $3,000.

The provincial government is being asked to follow the lead of Ontario and drop the sales tax on woodburning stoves and heaters. Four per cent of a $500 woodburning stove insert for a conventional fireplace is about $20. That's not much, but it's enough to buy a decent axe, or to put a downpayment on a chainsaw.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

What may we remember?

It was a rainy, windy, chilly morning in the early years of the 21st century. Two men stood at the corner of a Canadian city waiting for the horse car to take them to work at the factory that processed tasty plankton for the national diet.

"I can remember," said one of the men, whose improbable name was Smith, "when we had buses, gasoline buses if you can believe it, before all the oil wells ran out."

"Why, my old dad actually owned an automobile," said the other man, named Jones. "He kept driving it even when gas cost $75 a litre. And when there was no gas left anywhere, at any price, he put the car up on blocks as a kind of souvenir. I sold it for scrap after he died."

"Those were the days," said Smith with a sigh. "I once tasted salmon and it only cost about $35 for a small plate. But that was on my honeymoon and I was feeling reckless. Now, of course, all the fish is exported to pay interest on foreign debt."

Real beef

"Yes, and we had beef in our house, real beef, every Christmas," said Jones. "And eggs, too, until the poultry board killed off all the chickens to support the price and fine tune the economy."

"I've read somewhere about a fellow called Pierre, or something like that, and he wrestled inflation into the ground. Then a certain Joe, I think it was, wrestled it up again, and finally a John Blue Eyes, as they called him, issued a new, stable currency and paid off the government's debts in the old one after it was cancelled."

"That fixed everything all right," said Jones. "But I was lucky. I'd already cashed in my life insurance and some government bonds at nine cents on the dollar."

"Golly, it's cold this morning," said Smith, shivering. "I wish we could still buy that flannel underwear that Bob Stanfield used to make before he got lost in the deserts of Arabia. Sure, this silk from Japan is cheap at a thousand bucks for a suit but it doesn't keep you warm."

"I know, but silk is the only industry the Japanese had left when their big boom collapsed. And don't forget that Japan buys most of our main exports, pemmican to eat and birch bark to build their new navy on the original Canadian model."

"But a drop of rum would help in the winter time. Too bad they closed down the liquor stores."

"I don't miss it much. Make my own out of dandelions and anything I can find. It doesn't taste so good but it's not diluted like the government stuff was. Illegal, but the Mounties wink at it."

"They're human after all, I guess, and too busy opening private letters to worry about booze."

"You've got to hand it to the post office all the same. Since they started up the pony express I get a letter from my brother, clear across the continent from Halifax, in a month or two if the weather isn't too rough."

"He must be rich, eh? I can't afford many letters at $100 a stamp."

"Still, we're a lot better off than those Arab sheiks. When they'd sold their last drop of oil they had to give up their palaces and limousines and ride on camels again. And when they had to sell their harems that was the straw that broke OPEC's back. They're petitioning the United Nations for emergency aid, poor devils."

"But think of all the miserable Canadians who can't spend the winter in Hawaii, now that foreigners won't lend us any more money and put a receiver in Ottawa and closed down the whole government."

"At least we're spared those speeches explaining the latest industrial strategy and the unfolding of the universe."

This conversation had been overheard by two young men on their way to university for studies in the manufacture of healthy, synthetic food from manganese pellets mined in the ocean.

"Listen to these old guys talk," one of the students muttered to his companion. "Beef, salmon, eggs, automobiles! As if they'd ever seen such things."

"They're not lying, though," said the second student. "They really believe it. Just the fantasies of dotage and quite normal at their time of life."

Weak from hunger

"Here comes the car," said Jones. "It's late every day."

"What else do you expect," asked Smith, "when the horses are weak from hunger?"

"But I'll tell you something, confidentially," said Jones as they climbed into the open car. "Since the living standard fell and I walk about 10 miles a day I feel a hell of a lot better, and younger, too."

"So do I," Smith agreed. "And the kids stay home, nights, and the family gets along fine and it's warm in the kitchen if we can wangle a bit of wood for the stove."

"Well, we have our memories anyhow," said Jones. "And to tell the honest truth, I'm rather tired of plankton even with the artificial meat flavor and those seaweed eggs don't turn me on at breakfast."

"Just senility," a student whispered. "Pathetic but harmless."

Victoria Landmarks

Walbran Park on Gonzales Hill honors Captain John T. Walbran (1848-1913). Yorkshire-born, he trained on the famour Conway and sailed the world's seas until 1888.

In 1891, he took command of the Canadian government's steamship Quadra. From 1891-1903, his work on her took him to every part of the B.C. coast. Reporting on rocks and reefs, placing buoys, erecting beacons, servicing lighthouses, gave him a firsthand knowledge of the coast. This knowledge, added to his anecdotal skill and his studious research on earlier voyages to the coast, is probably why his British Columbia Coast Names, appearing in 1909 as a Department of Marine and Fisheries publication, proved so popular that it soon became a rare, costly book collector's item.

Then, in 1971, the Vancouver Public Library, as part of the centennial celebration of B.C.'s union with Canada, reprinted Walbran.

His acknowledgements show his voluminous correspondence and his debt to Hudson's Bay men, Royal Navy officers, and many notable local Victorians living at that time.

Beacon Hill, Brotchie Ledge, Ogden Point, Cadboro Bay, Cordova Bay — Walbran has facts or a yarn about them all.

Pope reawakens U.S. spirit

WASHINGTON — At the very least, Pope John Paul II has demonstrated something we have forgotten in America and even tend to deny: that a solitary individual with strong convictions and noble aspirations still touches the heart of a vast continental nation.

It is precisely the doubt on this point that has eroded the faith of so many, and led to such cynicism among the squabbling leaders of this political community.

What difference, people ask here, would it really make if Kennedy replaced Carter as the Democratic Party's nominee for the presidency in 1980? Or if Reagan, Connally, Baker, Ford, or somebody else took over the White House for the Republicans?

Playing games

The general view here is that all the candidates for the leadership of the republic are trapped in a complicated system of 35 state primary elections, popularity polls, fund-raising drives, and television spectaculars. But so far, none of them has touched the spirit and longing of the people as the pope has done in the last few days.

All the political leaders here have been playing games with the political problems of the day. President Carter has been pretending he was changing the "status quo" in Cuba with a series of meaningless military demonstrations out of Key West, Fla. His political opponents, specifically Connally and Baker, have been playing politics with his dilemma by saying that, confronted by the Soviet challenge, he was weak. He "blinked", they said, not saying what they would do, if he turned a minor controversy in Cuba into a major world confrontation with the Soviet Union.

The pope of Rome has been taking a wholly different view of the controversies between nations. He has been saying that the "security" of the Western world does not lie in its military arms alone, but in its moral authority, in its faith in itself, and in its compassion for the suffering and starving peoples of the world.

He has clearly not come to the western hemisphere — which he calls 'the continent of hope' — to congratulate us on our material success, but to condemn it. The paradox of his visit is that he has been so successful with the people, while so critical of their way of life. With the possible exception of Solzhenitsyn, he has condemned the moral anarchy, sexual license, and material consumerism in this country more than any other critic of our society.

Yet somehow, despite his condemnation of our spiritual bewilderment, he has been received here with more applause than any other religious or secular leader in the world. This is not going to lead to any kind of religious reformation, or popular belief in the Roman Catholic faith — his stern views of contraception, abortion, celibacy and religious training in the family — divide even his own parishioners. But his faith and conviction still influence the moral apathy of the age.

What the pope has done — at least here in Washington — is to make people in high office realize the force of moral conviction. To make them remember that they are not merely bureaucrats who propose laws, but that they are also the custodians of the nation's ideals, of the hopes and faiths that sustain it from one generation to another, and that anybody in office, or seeking office, can be important in promoting these ideals.

This is an important lesson for Washington these days. It has begun to doubt its ability to govern, even to reach any kind of consensus on the great issues of public policy. The president, as chief executive officer of the Republic and commander-in-chief, has not been able to get the consent of the Congress for the policies he believes are vital to the security of the Republic.

Likewise, the leaders of the majority members of the Congress — Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia and Speaker Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts in the House of Representatives, are defied so often by members of their own party that they have begun to wonder if any voice, in whatever exalted office, has any influence at all on public opinion.

But Pope John Paul II has somehow cut across all these doubts. He has brought us back to elemental things, and shown that even a lonely voice, crying for the beliefs we have lost, can be important.

This is the way of greatness, Walter Lippmann wrote back in 1943.

Way of greatness

"This is the way of greatness," he said. "In the supreme moments of history, terms like duty, truth, justice, and mercy — which in our torpid hours are tired words — become the measure of decision. We, unhappily, are acting as if we had forgotten them. We seem to be ashamed to utter them, in part because we tremble at the gibes of the Philistines, but in the main because they are remote from our habitual feeling . . . We are trying to be too shrewd, too clever, too calculating when what the anxious and suffering peoples cry out to us for is that we practise the elemental virtues and adhere to the eternal verities. They alone can guide us through the complications of our days. The straight and righteous path is the shortest and the surest."

This is precisely what Pope John Paul II was saying in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Des Moines — and apparently the people were listening to him and somehow feeling that it would break men's hearts if they didn't.

Treat as friend

I'm very very concerned about the way people are treating our environment. My biggest concern is the abuse of trees. People are cutting down trees in many cases just for the fun of it. The laws which protect our environment are a joke. It is about time the government got its act together and passed some legislation banning individuals from cutting down trees for fun.

I'm very concerned about the pollution laws which are a farce as far as I'm concerned. It is high time the government got busy and passed some laws providing very stiff penalities to those who pollute or cut down trees with no valid reasons.

I'm also very very concerned about the government's talk of using nuclear power in the coming future. I think they ought to know better. It is not a fail-safe system by any means. I'm also concerned about how people are wasting energy such as gas, electricity and wood products. The government should take some steps to stop people from being so wasteful. Energy is much too valuable to waste. It is high time people started to treat our enviroment like their closest friend not like their worst enemy. — David Lyon, Sointula.

Awakening instinct

I think the big event of this present moment is the visit of Pope John Paul II — not from the point of view of Roman Catholicism, but from the point of view of the phenomenon of his impact on millions of people.

I believe the central fact that concerns us here is the Pope's personality, and the ability he has to elicit emotion of an intensely loyal and jubilant kind. Now, quite apart from the personal factors, it is also apparent that there indeed is a need within all of us — an instinct even — to honor someone, to venerate someone, to believe in some kind of pure personality who radiates the forgotten wisdom of life.

This is what this exceptional man has done: with his personal magnetism and power he has been the catalyst in producing that chemistry of exultation and surrender that has been conditioned out of us by our secular and anti-hierarchical society. Here is an individual who seems to be able to pull it off — the true religious persona: gentle, pious, serene, and whole.

I think it is fair to say that one of the reasons for the great skepticism in modern civilization is simply because it was not obvious to more sophisticated and critical members of our society that religion paid off — that is, resulted in a more coherent and profound expression of intelligence and feeling. Somehow the rarity of this fact makes Pope John Paul II such a figure of celebration and even hysteria: he arouses us by his penetrating gentleness and strength, and we are suddenly witness to the phenomenon that authenticates our suppressed notions of ideal life, of a pure and saintly personality. We have no one to cheer for — and only rock stars and winning athletic teams precipitate the intensity of emotion that the Pope has, wherever he has gone.

Now I don't know how much dissonance the non-believer feels in attempting to understand how this man's presence gives the lie to skepticism — certainly there must be some of us who cannot bear to think we are so moved by someone who professes a set of beliefs of the cosmos that are in our estimation infantile or obselete. And yet here is the great lesson; we are shaped by forces for which the intellect is not equipped to explain away; and rather than assume we have deceived ourselves in rejecting organized religion, we should perhaps explore the possibility that some form of surrender and sensitivity to the possibility of the wholeness of life, to the possibility of an aesthetic of personal style (an absolute kind of integrity of feeling and purpose) may be what is organically pressing to flower within our consciousness. — Robin W. Carlsen, 1225 Sunnyside Avenue.

Giving thanks

In these greedy times the simple words "Thank you" all too often seem to have been dropped from our vocabulary. The Thanksgiving season seems the time to reactivate the phrase and give sincere thanks to all those who have donated so many materials, especially clothing, furniture and household goods, to help with the programmes for people with handicaps at Goodwill. The support given by the media and merchants has also been invaluable. To all may we say "Thanks-for-Giving". Without your continuing help Goodwill would simply cease to be.—Alec Reid, Community Relations Officer, Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped.

Towering Watersheds

Sen. Edward Kennedy's favorite locution seems to have become "mindful." In a single interview in The New York Times, he said he was "extremely mindful that as we move into the 80's we have to come to grips with the different realities of this period"; that we had been "unmindful in many instances that (programs) were administered by those who never believed in them," and — regarding his refusal to "rule out" a presidential race — "I was very mindful when I made this decision, what its implications were going to be and where it leads."

While pursuing the life of the mindful, the newly unruled-out candidate used such favorite words of the 60's as "decency" and "compassion," adding, "We have to move away from labels, slogans, cliches . . . ," which he found unacceptable.

Then, in another interview, he was reported to have used a word that I thought had been stamped out in recent years: "watershed." This is a watershed era, we're coming to a watershed, the early 60's were a watershed, etc.

As a service to the senator, let me wave him off "watershed." I had something to do with its brief vogue, and know that it is a word that can get a politician sandbagged.

The year was 1968, and I was writing speeches for Richard Nixon. Looking for some metaphor to picture a turning point, or dividing line, I turned to "watershed," which had been used in that sense in the mid-60's by such pundits as Theodore White and C. L. Sulzberger. The dictionaries still had the meaning as "drainage area of a river system," or "strip of high land dividing drainage areas," (taken about 1800 from the German Wasserscheide, which meant the metaphor was still fresh. So I used it in the title and text of a speech.

Other political writers snorted the word up and it blew their minds. The election of 1968 was to be one of those "watershed elections," everyone agreed, following which a flood of watershed usages inundated the political landscape.

In time, a raft of rationality appeared. Meg Greenfield, editorial writer for The Washington Post, blew the shed out of the water in 1969: "I have become an incurable, even obsessive collector of printed watersheds, of which I believe I now have the best collection in town — watersheds perching on escalation ladders, watersheds embedded in arms spirals, watersheds wrapped (like chicken livers, perhaps) in an enigma. It is not, however, an expression that I would dare to use myself. I came to that drainage basin two years ago and paddled left, into the sunset."

After this suppressing fire, Br'er Watershed, he lay low. Then Henry Kissinger revived the term; then an unwary editorialist went on to hail a space shot as "a watershed in space history"; gloomily, Miss Greenfield wrote, "I would be less than candid if I did not report that, at the present time, there is no light at the end of the watershed."

But she was gloriously wrong. Thanks to her sustained scorn, to the transient nature of trendiness, and to efforts to assuage my conscience by expunging the word from presidential speech, "watershed" soon sank from view. The fashion had passed; the vogue was over. The 60's definition found its way into dictionaries, which now supply us with both its literal, catchment meaning and its modern, dividing-line sense, but the flood of usage receded.

These lessons of hard experience are offered to Senator Kennedy in the hope that he will be mindful — or at least not unmindful — of the need for original labels, fresh slogans and cliches attuned to the 80's.

One or the Other

A few months ago, in telling the world not to use "centres around" when it meant "centres on," I wrote, "The confusion stems from the alternate phrase 'revolves around.'"

The point was right, but the use of the adjective "alternate" was wrong. A reader in England makes this correction: "To use 'alternate' as a synonym for 'alternative' is considered to be a sign of semi-literacy outside the U.S.A. Unfortunately, Webster's Third Unabridged allows this (misuse). The two words really do have quite separate and distinct meanings: 'alternate' implies the taking of turns, and 'alternative' implies a choice."

If you are one of those who believe that usage determines "correctness," then Webster's III is right — "alternate" can be used as a synonym for "alternative," and the nice distinction that our English reader makes can be ignored. What's more, history will be on your side: a century ago, "alternative" meant "by turns," and was even then synonymous with "alternate."

But if you like to use words that split hairs and make meaning more precise, then you will tell common usage it is befogging a useful difference by merging "alternate" with "alternative." Sometimes it is worth putting up a scrap.

Start with the verb "to alternate" (pronounced AL-ter-nate) and carry its meaning over to the adjective "alternate" (pronounced AL-ter-nit). You have a useful modifier that says, in a word, "First this one, then that one," or, "Now me, then you, then me again, and so on." Don't corrupt "alternate" with any other confusing meaning.

Then take "alternative," which means the choosing of one out of two courses; as a noun, it means such a choice (or "option"), and as an adjective, it is a synonym for "substitute." Limit it to that.

You have now struck a blow for precision. Lexicographers will call you elitist — "a self-appointed 'protector' of the language" — but a worthy distinction deserves all the protection it can get. Let's not blow alternately hot and cold on this: the alternative to holding the line is fuzziness.

'A horror story told by hypocrites'

Manchester Guardian
An Editorial

The dreadful scale of Cambodia's suffering over the past 10 years has only been matched by the callousness with which that suffering has been exploited. Cambodia has been, for the most part, a horror story retailed to the world by hypocrites, seeking to create out of the raw material of human agony in that country a foundation for their own political and military purposes.

The seating of the Pol Pot regime at the UN, with the assistance of the West, including the United States and Britain, underlines the wholly immoral nature of great power manoeuvring over Cambodia. In New York we saw the dismal spectacle of countries which support the monstrous Pol Pot for reasons of pure expediency arguing with those who support the Vietnamese client regime of Heng Samrin merely because its recognition would sustain Vietnamese and Soviet power in Southeast Asia.

Even the motives of those countries who suggested the seat be left vacant are dubious; for most of those merely wish to stay in the middle for other reasons. As throughout Cambodia's travail, the good of the people of Cambodia — what is left of them — is the least of anybody's considerations.

When the Americans were bombing and blasting, communists and western radicals alike joined in condemnation. Those same circles were strangely silent when early evidence of the atrocious nature of the Pol Pot regime began to surface. The United States publicized those first details readily enough, for they seemed to give the lost war in Cambodia a moral dimension that put American actions in a better light.

But there was from the start a strange ambivalence in the American line. They would have preferred to have been able to condemn Vietnam for a bloodbath and to criticize Cambodia for relatively minor violations of human rights, rather than the other way round. It was Vietnam, after all, which was moving closer to the Soviet Union, and Pol Pot's Cambodia which was part of a tacit axis between China, the United States, and the non-communist states of Southeast Asia.

With the Vietnamese invasion, the previously invisible moral indignation of China and her friends began to focus on the "puppet" regime of Heng Samrin, while that of the Soviet bloc remains firmly fixed on the Khmer Rouge. The West, with the exception of France, condemns both but supports Pol Pot as the "legal government."

The facts do not sustain this position. Heng Samrin was installed by the Vietnamese and is backed by a Vietnamese army. But, with their help, he controls the capital and most of the major towns. When the Lon Nol regime maintained a similar degree of power with U.S. aid it was regarded by most nations as a reasonable basis for recognition. It should be accepted, with all necessary reservations about the Vietnamese, that Heng Samrin is closer to a national government in being than is Pol Pot.

The only possible defence for support for Pol Pot is that it leaves open the "Sihanouk option." The prince might indeed be the best answer for Cambodia, if he could be inserted there. But the whole Vietnamese record suggests that this will not be possible. To hang on to Pol Pot as a means of keeping the door ajar for Sihanouk is therefore hardly more justifiable on practical grounds than it is on legal or moral ones.

Meanwhile Cambodia is starving — "traumatized and dying" in the words of one aid official. Any aid sent there will immediately become a factor in the internal situation, and much more of the debate over the aid "framework" springs out of the desire of the interested parties to use it as a means of building up the legitimacy or the military strength of the side they favor.

This wrangling must surely stop. The West should not have supported Pol Pot at the UN. It should not now compound this mistake by trying to structure aid to Cambodia in such a way as to give minimum legitimacy to Heng Samrin and maximum help to Pol Pot. Nor should it pursue the unrealistic aim of using an army of aid officials in Cambodia as a means of "internationalizing" that country and opening it up to Sihanouk. The world as a whole must stop wringing its hands over Cambodia in an ecstasy of selective indignation and start the process which in time may make that wounded society whole again.

We're slowing down

By ROBERT C. COWEN

Working with small but inexorable friction, the tides of sun and moon are slowing Earth's spin. This not only makes the day longer, says Australian meteorologist B.G. Hunt, it could seriously affect long-term climate, too.

He is urging Earth scientists to pay more attention to this important, but often overlooked, factor in trying to construct past or future patterns of climatic change.

As Hunt notes in a recent issue of Nature magazine, the force due to Earth's spin is one of the most obvious influences in weather. It makes winds blow with high pressure toward the right in the Northern Hemisphere and with high pressure toward the left south of the Equator. Among other things, this produces the characteristic spiral pattern of hurricanes.

Earth spun 2 to 2.5 times faster than it does now 1,500 million years ago. Hunt, who is with the Australian Numerical Meteorological Research Centre, points out that this must have had an important climatic effect. The wind-turning force due to the spin (called the Coriolis force) would have been substantially stronger than it is now. He notes that a "high rotation rate in a fluid system reduces the characteristic size of dynamic features, their associated transport processes, and the overall intensity of the motions." Translated into weather, that means a dramatically different sort of climate.

Earth's rotation and its changes may have "imposed an important, and possibly dominant, effect on the genesis and termination of the Precambrian ice age," Hunt says. (The Cambrian period began some 600 million years ago.) They would have altered rainfall patterns and the winds and ocean currents that distribute heat from equatorial regions.

Many factors affect climate, making it hard to isolate the possible influence of spin rate alone. Changes in solar output, in Earth's orbit, in atmospheric composition, and in the distribution of land and sea, among other major factors, probably would have affected climate substantially over the past 2,000 million years. Nevertheless, the Coriolis force resulting from Earth's spin is so important, Hunt thinks its influence at least can be suggested by simple computer models of climate which emphasize it alone.

Earth's spin-down is not constant. The rate has varied throughout geological time. Right now, it's adding something like 2-1000ths of a second to the day per century. Sometime in the remote future, the day and the months will have the same length (about 48 present Earth days).

Any climatic changes that accompany the continuing spin-down will come too slowly to be of practical concern to people. But for scientists trying to understand how climate works, Hunt says, it is important to learn more about the role Earth's rotation plays.

Tips for the fall bride

Russell Baker

Advice to a young woman on the threshold of marriage:

1. Leave a husband alone when he's watching baseball and he'll leave you alone when you're watching the Miss America pageant.

2. Always watch the Academy Awards and the Super Bowl together so you'll have something to talk about.

3. Don't start complaining about the cockroaches when he wants to be praised.

4. When you wish he were a little bit more like Cary Grant, don't mention it to him.

5. Wait until after breakfast to tell him you've decided to redecorate the living room.

6. Before quarrelling about money, take the gun out of the bedside table and lock it in the safe-deposit box at the bank.

7. If you're going to make a habit of complaining because he leaves dirty socks on the bedroom floor, get in the habit of always putting the cap back on the toothpaste tube.

8. Nag him constantly about taking better care of his health if you want to be constantly reminded how much better you'd feel if you lost a few pounds.

9. Never blame a husband for having relatives and most husbands won't blame you.

10. Wait until after breakfast to tell him the plumber sent a bill for $398.

11. If birthdays are more important to you than Christmas, Hanukah and the fourth of July combined, put a Christmas tree wrapped in red, white and blue bunting topped by a menorah in the living room several days before you want to receive gifts.

12. Don't complain that he doesn't take his turn washing the dishes unless you take your turn emptying the cat box.

13. If you want to get a husband out of the house chasing divorcees and widows, always read a Gothic novel at the dinner table.

14. Never cut your toenails while watching television unless you want a husband who belches during the Academy Awards.

15. Wait until after breakfast to tell him what he said last night to a whole roomful of people after the third martini.

16. Don't try to improve his mind and he won't try to teach you about basketball.

17. Leave both your minds alone or you'll ruin the Super Bowl arguing whether you ought to be reading Heidegger or getting in touch with econometrics instead of wasting time on television.

18. Take the trouble to find a decent mustard for his pastrami and he'll take the trouble to buy a better grade of rye.

19. When you want to move someplace more expensive, don't blame it on the cockroaches and he won't disappoint you by settling for a phone call to the exterminator.

20. When you run out of things to argue about, have a baby so you can argue about who has the most influential genes.

21. If a double chin appears in the house one day, pretend it's not there until a second one arrives to keep it company. Otherwise, you get into arguments about who isn't the least bit like Cary Grant and who isn't the least bit like the divorcee in that roomful of people last night after the second martini, which leads to lawyers.

22. Unless you like to hear a husband whine with self-pity on long automobile trips, learn to drive.

23. Don't surprise him with a new hair color when he arrives home and he won't be tempted to surprise you by coming back from Los Angeles with a new face-lift. (This is for later married life when you also always watch Lawrence Welk together so you'll have something to talk about.)

24. Don't ask him if he loves you when he wants to talk about Richard Nixon or complain about cockroaches, and someday he'll remember that you didn't and tell you he loves you and hand you a birthday present, three days late.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took a steep drop in heavy trading as a surge in interest rates jolted the market.

Several major banks across the country announced this morning that they were raising their prime lending rates to 14½ from 13½ per cent.

The unusual increase of a full percentage point, which followed new credit-tightening moves by the Federal Reserve Board over the weekend, came as something of a shock to Wall Street.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was fell at the close of moderate trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 482.9, off 3.9.

Industrials and oils were mixed.

Canadian shares were unchanged.

The computer criminal: He could rob you blind

By PETER J. SCHUYTEN
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The setting: a quiet university town somewhere in the Northeast. An "intruder" electronically penetrates the operating system of the town's centralized data processing center. After causing a series of bizarre accidents, the interloper threatens to "crash" the system, throwing municipal services into chaos unless a $5 million ransom is paid and electronically transferred to a numbered bank account somewhere overseas.

Fanciful? Not really. According to experts in the field, Louis Charbonneau's novel of computer crime, Intruder, could indeed happen. They say that such a scenario is technically feasible — and easier than most people realize.

According to a government report a few years ago, anyone with the right background in computer sciences and, say, nine months of working experience on a particular operating system could conceivably take over the system, using it to work against itself. Some experts say it would not even take that long.

"Software systems aren't perfect," says Theodore M.P. Lee, manager of system security for the Sperry Univac division of the Sperry Rand Corporation. "If someone really put his mind to it, he could take over a system. He might have to work at it a bit, but he could get into a position where he could read the computer's files and even change them, using the power of the computer against itself."

Stanley Mark Rifkin stole $10.2 million from California's Security National Bank in less than an hour. He knew enough about computers to crack the bank's software codes, causing the money to be transferred to an account in a New York bank, whereupon it was sent to Zurich and used to buy diamonds.

Rifkin was caught, but the experts suspect that most computer crime goes undetected or even unreported for fear of the embarrassment it would cause and the difficulty in making a prosecution stick.

"We only read about the failed computer criminals," says Robert A. Jacobson, president of International Security Technology Inc., a computer security consulting concern, adding, "The really successful ones are never really detected in the first place."

Security is an issue that many computer users apparently prefer to ignore. It is complicated and expensive. "The typical company doesn't really care about security," says Larry Wells, president of Creative Strategies, a market research firm.

With the rapid proliferation of computers, and in particular the trend toward distributed data processing (where a number of terminals are hooked by communication lines to a large central processor), companies are highly vulnerable not only to crimes such as fraud and theft of trade secrets but also to the accidental loss of valuable financial operating data through malfunctions, fire and the like.

What can the computer user do?

Most computer manufacturers build a certain level of security into their software. "You already get some of the mechanisms you need to restrict access to files in data banks," says Mr. Lee of Sperry Univac. "The difficulty is getting people to use them."

Beyond that, there is physical security, including a backup power system, air-conditioning, automatic fire detection and extinguishing, and a secure, usually computerized, locking system. The computer companies will usually supply a list of architects and contractors who specialize in facilities of this kind.

For minicomputers and intelligent terminals, Transaction Security Inc. of New York has recently developed a portable self-contained enclosure that provides these features.

For systems that use communication lines, backup lines to the telephone company central office are usually recommended, and devices that scramble data at one end and reassemble at the other end may be necessary.

Beyond that, the concerned user can hire a consultant. Jacobson of International Security Technology, for example, has developed a software program called Ramp that evaluates security risks of an installation and assesses the cost of additional protection. Then too, most of the "Big Eight" accounting firms have consulting arms that provide periodic audits of how secure a data processing system is.

In addition, there are companies that specialize in what are known as "software locks," programs costing between $5,000 and $15,000 that are designed specifically to protect computer systems from unathorized use by outsiders and even by insiders. One such company is Pansophic Systems Inc. of Oak Brook, Ill.

Then too, there are programs called audit trails, which record every entry into a system, the user, the nature of the transaction and the length of time the computer was used.

For very large computer users, there are backup facilities available to avoid a system crash. Companies such as Sun Information Services of Valley Forge, Pa., or Contingency Group Inc. of Bensonville, Ill., provide such services — fop $2,500 to $4,000 a month.

Finally, some companies, particularly those providing time-sharing services such as the General Electric Information Service Company, use "computer busters." One of these is the System Development Corporation of Santa Monica, Calif. Its job is to try to break into their computer systems.

Torstar offers dividend

TORONTO (CP) — Directors of Torstar Corp. has declared a quarterly dividend of 16 cents payable on Dec. 28, 1979, to shareholders of record on Dec. 13, 1979, as well as a special dividend of five cents. The dividends will be payable in cash or in the form of class B or class C shares.

Paper costs spiralling

VANCOUVER (CP) — Newspapers, already laboring under a 20-per-cent increase in newsprint prices this year, can expect another jolt early next year, an industry analyst says.

"There could be another $30-a-tonne increase next spring which would come on top of the $30 increase that will come into effect next month," Ross Hay-Roe of Pemberton Securities Ltd. said.

"The demand for newsprint continues to be extremely strong. A peak in U.S. consumption levels has been reached at a time where there has been a rapid increase in U.S. capacity. I think before 1980 is over we will see significant weakness in Canadian operating rates, but the market at present continues to be very strong."

Despite a recession in the United States and anticipated lower demand for newsprint next year, prices will continue to rise, Hay-Roe said. He said that despite falling demand in late 1973, mid-1974 and early 1975, prices surged ahead.

Newsprint producers posted an increase of $30 a tonne last spring and another of about $30 this fall, bringing the average Canadian price to $408 a tonne. The pace of increases has raised concern that small or marginally-profitable newspapers may not be able to carry the load.

Another hint of coming price increases for newsprint is producers' warning to big buyers of groundwood paper, which is similar to newsprint, that prices will rise early next year.

Forestry giant MacMillan Bloedel has warned B.C. Telephone Co. that it can expect to pay an additional 20 to 30 per cent next year for the groundwood paper it uses to print its two million telephone directories.

A B.C. Tel spokesman said the increase means that the cost of printing the directories will rise to $2.5 million, $400,000 higher than last year.

Groundwood paper now sells for $575 a tonne.

Church dumps Falconbridge

TORONTO (UPC) — The United Church of Canada said it sold all its shares in Falconbridge Nickel Mines because "the company's performance in the area of social responsibility made it an unsuitable investment."

The church said in a statement it was the first time in its history that it has sold stock.

"While there have been many instances of companies in which the church would not invest for ethical reasons, the sale of Falconbridge Nickel Mines shares is the first disinvestment."

The church said that over a five-year period it has tried through meetings, correspondence and appearances at the company's annual meetings to influence management to be more socially responsible.

Church treasurer William Davis said it was not only the company's partnership with the South African government which led to the sale "but a conviction that we differed on so many issues — investment in Chile, relationship with unions and workers in the Dominican Republic, the need to make corporate citizenship more central in day to day operations."

K-Tel enters oil business

MINNETONKA, Minn. (UPC) — K-Tel International, noted for its high pressure television marketing techniques for music and other products, hopes to invest $5 to $6 million by the end of the year in the oil and gas industry, largely in Canada.

The company said the expansion in the energy field was made possible by excess cash reserves generated by its music sales. It reported a record worldwide pre-tax profit of $9.1 million on sales of $167 million for the 12 months ended June 30.

K-Tel's Canadian subsidiary established K-Tel Petroleum Ltd. in June to spearhead the oil and gas investments. The new company is under the direction of Dr. Ernest Pelzer, former chief geologist of Petro Canada.

K-Tel president Philip Kives said the company has already participated in the drilling of three wells with excellent results — two wells are capable of oil production and a third is an indicated gas producer.

He said K-Tel hopes to participate in the drilling of 35 wells in Canada and the U.S. before the end of the year. The Canadian exploration will be in British Coolumbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Spies in apple orchard are the human kind

VANCOUVER (CP) — It seems there's more to the apple industry than the northern spy variety of the fruit.

The British Columbia Fruit Growers Association admitted on the weekend it hired a human spy — a private detective — to watch the operation of two maverick growers who have sold 700,000 pounds worth about $300,000 to a Vancouver-based food chain.

"That was completely reprehensible," producer Graem Nelson of Oliver said of the detective in a telephone interview from Vancouver. "He wrote a report which sounds like a 10-year-old playing James Bond.

"We received a warning before the first truck left here to look out for people taking pictures and following us. On the first day, there was this guy taking pictures from a car and following the truck into Vancouver, right to Kelly Douglas on Kingsway."

Kelly Douglas food wholesalers purchased the apples for its Super-Valu chain which has sold them for 29 cents a pound. Grower association apples marketed through B.C. Tree Fruits Ltd. have sold in competing supermarkets for 49 cents a pound.

The sales by Nelson and his partner, Ronald Fournier, who formed Black Sage Orchards have angered the 2,200-member growers association which is threatening to have them removed from the $100,000,000-a-year Okanagan tree fruit industry.

"I don't think they can do anything because we are independents but they don't need to hire people to spy on us," said Nelson.

Association president George Fraser said the surveillance took place about a month ago.

"It was a rather hastily-thought-out action," he said. "In retrospect, it would have been easier to go up to the driveway and ask what they were doing."

Fraser said he won't comment on the association's next move but said private detectives will not be involved.

In an earlier prepared statement, he said action to remove the two growers from the industry is in progress and any other association growers who sell fruit outside the tree fruit marketing agency will be dealt with.

Meanwhile, Ruth Lotzkar, past national president of the Consumers Association of Canada, said her group favors any system which helps consumers save money.

"We are not opposed to marketing boards if they work in the public interest and if they are accountable," she said.

equal opportunities

With two seemingly equal advertising opportunities available, how would you decide which was to carry your sales messages?

We have a suggestion — take a few minutes to find out just how seemingly equal they really are.

Ask questions — how big is their circulation audience? Where do readers live? how much do they pay? And others.

Then ask for proof!

Ask to see a copy of their latest report from the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Schools under guard for fear of more arson

GRAND FORKS (CP) — Four schools and four other school board buildings are being guarded 24 hours a day and several companies have cancelled fire insurance for a Doukhobor cultural centre in nearby Brilliant because of arson threats.

William Baldry, superintendent of schools in this West Kootenay community, said the constant surveillance, which started two weeks ago, was advised by the fire marshall's office in Vancouver and by the Insurance Corp. of B.C. which insures the schools.

He said one secondary school, three elementary schools and four other school buildings are being guarded, but he would not say whether the guards are armed.

Baldry said the move was made "after the recent problems occurred and statements were made to the press."

Baldry was referring to recent fires and trials on arson charges, the latest in a long list of incidents that have marked the life and internal struggles of Doukhobors in southeastern British Columbia.

John J. Verigin, the 58-year-old Orthodox leader, was acquitted last month on charges of conspiracy to commit arson. One man charged with Verigin was acquitted while a third man was given a suspended sentence and put on three years probation in the burning of the Union of Spiritual Communities of Christ offices (USCC) here and the old post office.

Last weekend, 19 members of the Sons of Freedom, another Doukhobor sect, were charged with arson after a CP Rail shed burned down.

A USCC spokesman said there have been further arson threats.

He said four of five insurance companies cancelled policies on the group's cultural centre in Brilliant, showpiece for the Orthodox Doukhobors, even though the centre has watchmen.

The spokesman, who did not want his name used, said the centre was insured for $1 million, but the policy with the one remaining company is only for about 15 per cent of that amount.

"We have arranged for volunteer watchmen around the Brilliant cultural centre," he said. "They are not guards, they are not prepared to deal with threats in a violent manner."

He said volunteers also guard USCC offices and Verigin's home, both in Grand Forks, and the tomb of Peter Verigin, an ancestor of John Verigin and the man who led the Doukhobors to Canada, in Castlegar.

Gold teeth hot sellers

VANCOUVER (CP) — City gold dealer Mike Levy says his recent gold-buying spree brought 5,000 potential vendors to his store.

"People brought us everything," he said in an interview. "They were pouring stuff onto the market. There were gold teeth like you wouldn't believe."

He said when a dentist removes a gold crown or cap to make way for a plate he often gives the gold back to the patient.

"The guy throws it into a drawer but when he sees our ad he brings it into us and we put in on the scale and buy it for the weight," said Levy. "We'll pay $15 or $20 for a cap."

But not all gold teeth are brought in by their owners.

"My favorite anecdote happened in Montreal," said Levy. "A lady brought in several pounds of gold teeth and I asked where they came from. At first she said her husband was a dentist. Then after I'd bought the teeth she admitted she was an undertaker's wife.

"I guess I'll get into trouble from undertakers for telling you that one. But people who have arrived at undertakers don't need teeth where they're going."

Levy and his father opened coins and stamps concessions at Woodward's stores in 1963 and since then have opened branches in other stores.

"People just can't relate to these high prices," he said. "Fifteen years ago you'd pay $20 for a place-setting of sterling flatware, today you pay $75 to $100. Silver is around $18 to $19 an ounce Canadian. People are making profits on what they paid retail."

Levy said that until recently, Olympic coins were the worst drag on the market.

"We sold them originally at $53.50 a set but not more than six months ago we didn't want them at $33 a set," he said. "Now we're paying $60 just because of the silver in them."

He said in his recent buying spree here he purchased "a whole ton of rings — rings that had been run over by trucks, rings that had been cut off deceased people. Old pocket watches. People were really cleaning house."

Levy said he spent several hundred thousands of dollars.

"We don't profess to pay the very highest prices because our overheads are high too," he said. "But we do pay fair prices with just enough of a mark-up so that we can make a profit."

He said he will take any quantities of scrap gold and silver.

The scrap is shipped to a refinery in Toronto where it is melted down. Good jewelry is either sold privately to brokers or sent to an auction house in Toronto.

Yew Point 'unacceptable'

Yew Point at Fort Rodd Hill is no place to put oil storage tanks, Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell said Friday.

She said a proposal by Defence Minister Allan McKinnon that gasoline be unloaded at an Esquimalt military jetty and piped to tanks at Yew Point is not an acceptable solution.

Yew Point has been granted to Parks Canada by the defence ministry, although it has not yet been formally dedicated as parkland. McKinnon said he would try to get 23 acres back for the tanks.

Dowell said parkland is too scarce to be converting it back to industrial sites. Some other location must be found.

In addition, she said, oil companies would not be interested in going any place they might not be welcome.

She was referring to a statement by Colwood regional director Howard Drummond that he would lead a battle against the Yew Point proposal.

"Oil companies will only go where they are welcome. And they know they will be welcome at Nanaimo or Hatch Point."

She defended her statement made Thursday that Victoria will lose the oil tanks to some up-Island community. She said she got the information from Gulf Canada and relayed it to the press.

However, on Friday a spokesman for Shell said the site issue probably wouldn't be resolved before 1980.

Uranium study to continue

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial royal commission into uranium mining will not be suspended because a company is exploring for uranium on land partly owned by Premier Bill Bennett, commission chairman Dr. David Bates said Monday.

Bates was responding to charges of conflict of interest from New Democratic Party leader Dave Barrett after the matter was raised during commission hearings.

Bates said that as far as the commission is concerned, there is no conflict of interest because royal commissions are independent of government.

"Mr. Barrett would well know that under the Public Inquiries Act, once a commission is established it is beyond the government to influence it," he said.

Barrett said the commission should be suspended because Union Oil Co. of Calgary is exploring for uranium on property owned by the Bennett family near Kelowna.

A company spokesman said in an interview he believed the company began drilling for uranium on the property in 1977, but he would not say whether any had been found.

The premier's brother, R. J. Bennett, said he gave the company permission to drill but had little choice because the family does not hold mineral rights to the land.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"

Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

HER DAY, for the 104th time, was marked by Mrs. Hannah J. Dickson at Memorial Pavilion on Friday, with greetings read by nursing aide Stephanie Grove-White. Born in 1875 at Kincardine, Ont., Hannah went to Duluth, Minn., at the age of four, where she grew up and became a teacher, arriving here in 1901, to teach at Sahtlam, near Duncan, before marrying. Grandfather was William Haslam, Prince Edward Island MP, in whose livingroom confederation papers were signed in the decade before she was born.

Protesters ignore police

GILLIES BAY (CP) — About 40 demonstrators defied a police warning and removed surveyors' posts and flags on Texada Island during a weekend protest against B.C. Hydro's proposed transmission line between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

A member of the Powell River RCMP detachment told the demonstrators the stakes should not be touched because they were private property. However, no police were present when the protesters arrived at the access road to the proposed site of the Cheekey-Dunsmuir twin transmission line and pulled out the stakes and flags.

"It looks like we took the easy way and the police took the hard way to get to the site," said Murray Kennedy, a spokesman for the First Step Alliance, which organized the protest.

A police spokesman said Monday no further action would be taken unless the owners of the stakes complained.

Kennedy said the stakes and flags will be returned to B.C. Hydro in Vancouver.

Kennnedy said the demonstrators were trying to draw attention to the lack of public input into the project and the costs and environmental effects of the line. Hydro wants to build the line to increase power to Vancouver Island.

A GREAT CHOICE

Socred heavies hit ELUC's farmland move

SHELFORD
. . .'more attention'

Two prominent Socreds say they are worried by a provincial cabinet committee's removal of prime Fraser Valley farmland from the agricultural land reserve.

Cyril Shelford, agriculture minister until his defeat in the May 10 provincial election, and Bill Ritchie, MLA for Central Fraser Valley, have joined other critics of the cabinet's Environment and Land Use Committee which overturned a B.C. Land Commission decision and released 626 acres for an industrial park.

Shelford said the land commission does not belong under Environment Minister Rafe Mair's control and should be returned to the agriculture ministry.

The cabinet committee, headed by Mair, is not paying enough attention to agricultural needs when processing appeals to get land out of the reserve, he said.

Ritchie, a possible agriculture minister in a cabinet shuffle expected next month, said he is puzzled by the committee's decision to release the land which has high farming potential.

Mair said today he missed the July 4 meeting where the decision was made to free the land.

And as far as he's concerned, the matter is closed.

"The decision was made by my cabinet colleagues. I don't have the power to overrule them."

Mair said he is "only the chairman, not the president. I'm not a czar."

ELUC vice-chairman Alex Fraser, the highways minister, presided at the meeting.

Gary Runka, land commission member and former chairman, announced Friday he was resigning to protest the removal of the land from the reserve following the appeal by Gloucester Properties Ltd.

Runka said the removal was the last straw in his growing frustration and disillusionment in the government's lack of support for the commission.

"That's some of the best farmland in the Fraser Valley," he said. "If that's allowed to go, what the hell are we (the commissioners) doing wasting our time?"

Until the government changes the appeal process and restores some of the power the commission lost two years ago, appeals to the committee will continue to grow, he said.

In September, 1977, amendments to the Land Commission Act gave the environment ministry authority to allow cabinet appeals on commission decisions while under the old act, an appeal required leave from at least two land commissioners.

Fraser told reporters last week that he has walked through the 626 acres in question and said it is not viable farmland.

Land commission officials, however, point out that the adjacent 2,000 acres are under heavy cultivation.

further comment today.

Kelly was placed on a forced holiday two weeks ago after it became public he had suggested loyal Socreds practise "dirty tricks" to promote the party cause.

On the weekend, Duncan Myers, president of the Shuswap-Revelstoke Social Credit Association, called for the resignation of party president Les Keen because he said he knew of the tricks advocated by the party researchers for more than a year.

Myers said Keen should have taken action after attending a seminar a year ago during which members were instructed on how to write phoney letters to newspapers.

"Keen was at the campaign meeting and didn't do anything after," Myers said. "He's had a year to do something about it."

About 170 copies of a tape recording of Kelly's speech were later distributed to party members.

Myers said he is not satisfied with Keen's response that Kelly's statements should have been edited from the tape.

Keen must take responsibility for the tapes, whether they were distributed with his consent or not, he said.

"We need a person in there (as president) who knows what's going on," said Myers.

"I'm new to the party; maybe I'm a greenhorn. But I want to make it clear that our members are not party to that garbage."

Among other things Kelly told a Socred constituency meeting a couple of weeks ago was that letters to newspapers be sent over false names if the sender wanted to remain anonymous.

Meanwhile, Premier Bill Bennett's communications planning adviser, Dave Brown, has denied in a telephone interview from Tokyo that the premier's office authorized use of the dirty tricks letter-writing tactic.

"The premier's office did not authorize the letter-writing campaign and I doubt he knows anything about it," said Brown, who is touring Japan with the premier.

Brown, noting that Kelly was employed by the caucus, said the premier's office doesn't have anything to do with the running of the caucus office.

Gas hike protested

SEATTLE (AP) — Officials of the Washington Natural Gas Co. will ask B.C. to help press its case for a cut in the price of Canadian natural gas exported to the U.S., a company official says.

Spokesman Ron Norwood says executives from the the utility planned to meet today with the B.C. Energy Commission in the hope the commission will recommend a price cut to the National Energy Board in Ottawa.

The price of Canadian gas exported south of the border is due to rise 23.2 per cent, to $3.45 U.S. a thousand cubic feet from $2.80, on Nov. 3.

Norwood said during the weekend the Canadian price increase will mean an average increase of 10 per cent in the price Puget Sound area consumers pay for their gas. This increase, subject to approval by state and federal agencies, would come on top of one posted Oct. 1.

The Washington utility receives about 62 per cent of its gas from Canada. Canada exports about one trillion cubic feet of gas to the U.S. a year, amounting to about five per cent of U.S. total gas consumption.

Rabies vaccine tested

TORONTO (CP) — A new human-derived rabies vaccine that would require only four injections instead of the present 14 is being tested at Connaught Laboratories, said Dr. E. W. Pearson, Connaught medical director.

Pearson said in an interview he hopes the new vaccine, being tested this month, will be safer than the present Semple vaccine, but as effective against rabies.

Semple vaccine is made by growing rabies virus in rabbit brain cells. In some cases patients are paralysed by the vaccine although this reaction can usually be reversed.

The new vaccine is made by growing the virus in a laboratory broth made from human fetal cells — diploid cells with the full complement of chromosomes. It is the first time human-derived rabies vaccines have been developed in Canada, Pearson said.

The vaccine has been tested on animals and now must be tested on human volunteers, Pearson said.

UAW pact won

TORONTO (CP) — Employees of General Motors of Canada Ltd. in Quebec and at least one Ontario centre have voted to accept a three-year contract lifting the average hourly wage to $11.70 from $8.13 by the end of the agreement.

Quebec members of the United Auto Workers voted Sunday 1,386 to 150 in favor of the contract.

In St. Catharines, Ont., GM employees from two plants voted in favor of the contract, but union officials refused to reveal a breakdown of the voting until Wednesday when voting by all UAW locals is finished.

The 3,898 workers at Ste. Therese, north of Montreal, walked out Thursday demanding resolution of at least 19 local issues that were not part of a tentative agreement reached just after midnight Wednesday night with 33,000 GM of Canada workers in six Ontario plants and three in Quebec.

Auto workers at GM of Canada's Oshawa, Ont., plants were to vote today and workers at the Toronto plant were to vote Wednesday on the contract.

Liberal 'purity'

OTTAWA (CP) — Persons who have rejected liberalism for so-called neo-conservative ideologies are not true Liberals, Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau said Saturday.

In a speech before about 300 delegates and observers from Liberal parties in Europe, Africa, Asia and Latin America, the 59-year-old Liberal party leader dwelt on the two political philosophies' similarities which he said may confuse voters.

Trudeau said traditional Liberals espouse freedom for the individual, social justice, economic freedom without damaging laisez-fair (do what you will) policies and individual responsibility for his own actions.

He indicated that traditional conservative tendencies toward political and economic policies have "led to abuses of power . . . as the rich become richer and the poor, poorer."

Trudeau maintained that neo-conservatism, as outlined in books recently published in the United States, is only a way of dodging the so-called left-wing label conservatives that have slapped on liberals.

"These people who proclaim themselves neo-conservatives are doing liberal philosophers an injustice," he said. "They (the neo-conservatives) are advocating what we have been doing all along."

18-month ordeal ends

EDMONTON (CP) — "It's good to be home," Jakov Bakich said as he ended an 18-month-long nightmare in the welcoming arms of family and friends.

Bakich, 66, returned Sunday to the wife and son he had left in Edmonton in May, 1978, on what was to be a six-week vacation but turned into a mind-wrenching ordeal that saw him spend 10 months in a Yugoslavian jail.

"I'm happy because I'm home again to my family," the retired caretaker said as he negotiated his way through a crowd of reporters.

Bakich, a Canadian citizen, had gone to Yugoslavia to pay a last visit to his Montenegro homeland. He was arrested on war-crimes charges, accused of collaborating with Axis occupying forces and commanding an execution squad during the Second World War.

He spent 10 months in a cell in a centuries-old prison in Titograd before his trial, six of those months in solitary confinement.

On March 29, 1979, he was acquitted. He was released from jail but still could not leave Yugoslavia because the prosecutor in the case had appealed for a new trial. The appeal was rejected by the Supreme Court of Montenegro Sept. 17 and Bakich was finally free to return to Canada.

Wife Milusa, 60, who speaks little English, and son Peter, 28, were at the Edmonton International Airport when Bakich's CP Air flight from Amsterdam landed at 2:55 p.m. MDT.

"We're going to have a little party," Peter Bakich said. The 100 or so family friends who had come to the airport were invited.

Bakich, who suffers from rheumatism but looked fit after his odyssey, thanked the Canadians who helped extricate him from his Yugoslavian turmoil, including Edmonton lawyer Branny Schépanovich and Daniel Gagnier of the Canadian Embassy in Belgrade.

"Canada helped me lots . . . Canada is the best country in the world," he said in broken English.

'Breakthrough' on PLO

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark's statement that he would consider negotiating with the Palestine Liberation Organization is a breakthrough and de facto recognition of the PLO, says Palestinian spokesman Abdullah Abdullah.

Abdullah said today the Palestine section of the Arab League information centre here now wants Canada to take the next step and talk with the PLO as well as the Israelis in Middle East peace efforts.

Clark said in an interview on a CBC television program Sunday that "in my view, with two conditions, we would be prepared to consider the PLO" as the group speaking for Palestinians.

The PLO would have to renounce violence and recognize the state of Israel's right to exist.

Moshe Ofer, minister-counsellor of the Israeli embassy here, said the situation remains unchanged because of these two conditions.

"Neither of these two conditions have been met by the PLO," Ofer said.

Abdullah said the Palestine section of the Arab information centre considers Clark's statement de facto recognition because he recognized the PLO's existence. He said the prime minister might interpret it differently.

The PLO has renounced terrorism, he said. But he added that continuing violence in Israel is really "an act of resistance to foreign occupation." He was referring to Israeli occupation of what Palestinians say is their land.

No one should ask the Palestinians to lay down their arms while their territory is occupied, he said.

Asked whether the PLO is ready to recognize Israel's existence as a state, he said Israel does not recognize the PLO and he does not see why the PLO should have to make the first move.

Meanwhile, Robert Stanfield, former Progressive Conservative leader sent by Clark on a fact-finding mission to the Middle East earlier this year, said Sunday in Cairo that Egypt has expressed its concern over Clark's promise to move the Canadian Embassy in Isreal from Tel Aviv to Jerusalem.

After a meeting with Premier Mustapha Khalil, Stanfield told reporters the Egyptian attitude toward the pledge "is one of concern about any such step being taken by Canada."

Stanfield arrived in Cairo on Saturday for a six-day visit for talks with Egyptian officials.

Impasse over Alberta energy

MONTREAL (UPC) — Prime Minister Joe Clark and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed made little apparent progress toward an agreement on energy pricing and supplies, despite a two-and-a-half hour closed-door meeting Monday that was "exploratory at best."

Clark, with Finance Minister John Crosbie, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn and advisor Jim Gillies met with the Alberta premier in a 26th floor suite of a downtown hotel.

Lougheed was the first to leave saying little to the swarm of reporters waiting outside the hotel room door.

"The position of the Alberta government is clear," Lougheed said sternly. "The resources belong to the people of Alberta and they ... should be compensated accordingly," he said.

Lougheed said the discussion with Clark had been "exploratory at best."

"I won't say I'm pleased or displeased with the results of this meeting," Lougheed said. "We're not any closer to an agreement on what oil prices should be, but we'll have more discussions I'm sure."

When asked had there been movement on either side, Lougheed responded "you mean did I get up for a cup of coffee?"

In contrast to Lougheed's stern looks and curt reponses, Clark smiled when he left the room 10 minutes later.

"There are obviously many questions to resolve," the prime minister said. "The government of Canada and the government of Alberta are not in agreement on several things, but discussions such as this are useful."

"We're probably a little bit closer to an agreement because now Mr. Lougheed and I know where each other stands on matters of the details. We've got a long way to go in talks with all the provinces, but I'm confident on an agreement on energy policy. It just won't happen tomorrow, that's for sure."

The special holiday meeting in Montreal had been organized at the request of Clark. An aide said Clark had learned the Alberta premier would be in the east over the weekend "and wanted to take advantage of that to talk energy."

Bank prime up to 13¾%

Conservatives came to power in May.

It follows an announcement Saturday by the U.S. Federal Reserve Board that it was raising the discount rate in that country to 12 per cent — its highest ever.

Since March, 1978, the Canadian bank rate has been raised 10 times from eight per cent.

The Bank of Canada resisted an increase in interest rates two weeks ago when the Federal Reserve Board announced a previous half-per-cent increase in its lending rate. But Bouey said today he felt the central bank had to match its U.S. counterpart this time.

By raising its rate, the central bank signals the chartered banks and other lending institutions that it wishes them to charge their borrowers more, discouraging credit buying and tightening the amount of money circulating in the marketplace.

The chartered banks normally follow the central bank's example within one or two days. This has pushed their prime lending rate — the interest charged to their blue-chip corporate borrowers — to 13.75 per cent.

Most other interest rates, inuding those for consumer loans, mortgages and the interest banks pay their depositors, can also be expected to rise.

Bouey said in a news release the 0.75-per-cent increase was needed to fight inflation and to keep the dollar from sliding on world currency markets.

Referring to the U.S. increase, Bouey said: "While short-term interest rates can sometimes move differently in the two countries, there are severe limits to the degree to which Canada can matintain short-term interest rates lower than those in the United States when Canada is as dependent as it currently is on inflows of capital from abroad to finance the large international payments deficit on its current account."

Finance Minister John Crosbie has predicted the country will have an international payments deficit of $7 billion this year, but recent unfavorable economic developments have convinced many economists this estimate is too optimistic.

Two Que. MPs get Clark plums

OTTAWA (UPC) — Prime Minister Joe Clark has made last-minute changes in preparation for today's opening of Parliament, promoting Quebec cabinet minister Heward Grafftey and naming 22 Tory MPs as parliamentary secretaries.

Grafftey, who had held the obscure post of social programs, took over the science and technology portfolio from Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn. Prime Minister Joe Clark said Hnatyshyn did not have time for both posts.

Among the backbenchers named Monday to the $5,600-a-year secretary posts, where they perform tasks for the minister when he is not available, was Richard Janelle. Janelle, who will also receive the standard MP's income of $41,300, switched last month to the Conservatives from the Quebec-based Social Credit party.

Clark had opposed the parliametary secretaries' posts when he was in opposition but said he discovered during the summer how "valuable they could be to the government."

Grafftey's social programs portfolio, which had never been clearly defined, was abolished only four months after its creation. Clark said plans to appoint a "superminister" to oversee social programs and spending made it unnecessary.

That new position is expected to go to David Macdonald, the present secretary of state, but must wait several weeks for legislation creating the new job, Clark said.

Grafftey, one of only two Conservatives elected in Quebec, repeated the Conservative election campaign charge that Canadian spending on research and development is too low. However, the new minister said, "I'm not saying at this early date we should be spending a lot more."

Among the new secretaries is Tom Siddon, B.C. MP for Richmond-South Delta, who goes to Fisheries Minister James McGrath, a Newfoundlander.

The schedule for the daylong ceremonies opening the 31st Parlimanet began in the Senate, with the swearing-in of the government members who include three members of Clark's cabinet.

James Jerome, the veteran Liberal Speaker, will continue the same role in the new Parliament despite a different government. The MPs' election today of Jerome and Liberal Gerald Laniel as his deputy had been agreed to last week.

Jobless decline, but not here

pressed areas and young job-seekers suffered most of the burden. The jobless rate in Newfoundland, for example, was 14.1 per cent — almost twice the national average.

For those in the 15-to-24 age bracket, the unemployment rate was 12.3 per cent.

Windsor, Ont., which has been the most obvious metropolitan trouble-spot in the unemployment picture for the last three months because of declining automotive production, showed a lower jobless rate than several other cities in September.

Its unemployment was 7.3 per cent, compared with rates of 9.7 per cent for Sudbury, Ont., 9.3 per cent for Halifax and 10.5 per cent for St. John's, Nfld. One possible reason for the drop in Windsor is that many workers have taken earlier retirement or made other arrangements.

Government statisticians say the main reason for the country's high unemployment rate is the large number of new workers entering the job force every year.

Today's figures showed 63.2 per cent of the population either at work or actively seeking a job. This compares with a proportion of 57.6 per cent a decade ago.

Most economists are already predicting worsening unemployment in the winter months.

Unemployment rates for September across Canada were:

— Newfoundland, 14.1 per cent from 14.4 per cent in August.

— Prince Edward Island, 10.6 per cent from 11.0 per cent.

— Nova Scotia, 10.2 per cent from 10.5 per cent.

— New Brunswick, 10.7 per cent from 11.5 per cent.

— Quebec, 9.1 per cent from 8.8 per cent.

— Ontario, 6.1 per cent from 6.5 per cent.

— Manitoba, 5.0 per cent from 5.5 per cent.

— Saskatchewan, 3.9 per cent from 3.7 per cent.

— Alberta, 3.7 per cent from 3.8 per cent.

The city with the lowest unemployment rate was Edmonton at 3.1 per cent, followed by Regina with 3.9 per cent.

Power to the provinces

The speech promised changes in the rules of Parliament to increase the resources and the powers of parliamentary committees — a key theme of Conservatives while in opposition — and greater freedom for MPs to introduce legislation, the so-called private members bills.

First part of the thrust towards more responsibility for backbench MPs would be creation of four special committees to look into the needs of the handicapped, to examine ways to strengthen the role of the voluntary social groups, to study current policies on foreign ownership including the role of the Foreign Investment Review Agency, and to look for ways to prevent cost overruns on major government projects.

These four committees will be asked to report by early next year.

Clark also made good on another campaign promise by announcing that a joint Commons-Senate committee will be given the chore of "a broad inquiry" into the future development of nuclear energy in Canada.

In addition, standing committees of the Commons will be asked to examine cultural policy, Canadian foreign policy and pensions.

Another Commons committee would be asked to look into ways to strengthen committee powers, how to make ministers more accountable and whether there should be a permanent Commons Speaker.

Also pledged is greater accountability to the Commons on the government's spending plans. Commons committees would get the right to examine the annual reports of Crown corporations. There will also be committee review of the annual reports of the commissioner of official languages and the Economic Council of Canada.

The government says annual estimates of government spending, presented to the Commons each February, will be in more understandable form. And they will also contain spending projections for the succeeding four years "so that you can judge the probably impact of today's decisions on tomorrow's economy."

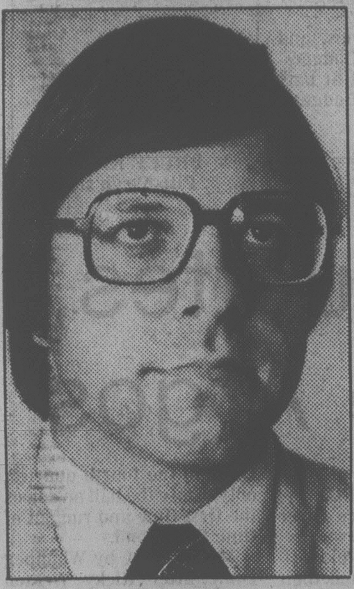
Bright new look but still a jail for kids



PHILLIPS
. . . it's not a cure

By DEREK SIDENIUS

The old grey Juvenile Detention Home at 1125 Pembroke just isn't what it used to be.

Gone is its drab and dreary look.

All is bright and light and even cheerful now, the result of a $250,000 face-lift.

The public had its first glimpse of what the summer-long renovations have produced when members of the centre's volunteer group held an Open House last week.

It was a bit premature. The work was supposed to have been completed in time for the event but construction has dragged on longer than expected. The actual opening date is still anyone's guess. Some say the middle of the month; others the end.

However, that didn't deter more than 600 guests who passed through the doors in a 6½-hour period.

JDH at first blush is almost bearable but it's still a jail for kids. As director Del Phillips acknowledges: "The JDH isn't meant to be a fun place."

In the old days everything about the home was inadequate. Staff quarters were cramped. Kitchen appliances were always breaking down. Meals were served in the inmate day rooms on rickety tables. The outdoor playing area had such a slope to it play was next to impossible. The toilet and shower facilities were abominable and most cells were unfurnished. Inmates slept on the floor. There was no fire exit in either of the two cell blocks.

The renovations have created a separate wing for staff, both indoor and outdoor visiting areas, a new classroom with a small lab and six study stalls, a large arts and crafts room, three interview and meeting rooms, a modern, well-equipped kitchen, spacious dining room, games room and a place where inmates, visitors and staff can prepare light snacks at night.

The interior throughout has been painted a soft ivory. Door frames are accentuated bright red, blue, yellow and green.

Windows have been placed in cells along outside walls; inside cells have skylights. The panes are made of an unbreakable plastic.

There's an intercom to all public rooms. It can be used to listen in as well as give messages or pipe in music.

There's a sophisticated fire alarm and detection system as well. In an emergency an operator can unlock all cells and fire doors simultaneously with the turn of a key.

For staff there's a trouble alarm system. Staff members will carry a small plastic box with them as they make their rounds. If they get into a situation they can't handle and need help they can press a button on the box which activates by remote control a piercing alarm in the control room.

Another new feature is an empty room for kids who become aggressive. The room will have a punching bag. Foam rubber padding will line the walls. Youngsters who act up will be confined to the room for periods up to 15 minutes. If that doesn't cure them, they'll be put in one of two unfurnished observation cells. The stay there is open-ended.

The centre has been newly furnished with light-weight plastic chairs and sofas. A standard cell will have a small desk, chair and a bed.

Some cynics are putting bets on how long the furniture will last. The reason beds weren't in the cells before was most had been taken apart and smashed by the inmates.

Some of rules have been changed, too.

When a youngster is admitted he'll be given four choices. He can either attend school — two hours in the morning and two in the afternoon; he can spend the time doing arts and crafts; he can go on kitchen or clean-up duty, or he can sit in his cell all day long and do nothing.

Under the old rules the time was unstructured. Inmates could, if they wanted, watch television for hours on end. Most did.

Television now will be strictly controlled.

The renovations and changes are the result of the provincial government's decision last February to bring back industrial training schools for juvenile offenders.

The schools were abolished in 1969 and over the 10-year period that followed, judges were unable to impose jail terms on juveniles.

As a consequence JDH and other youth detention centres around the province were nothing more than remand centres, places to hold juveniles in custody while they were awaiting trial. Stays seldom exceeded a week.

Under the new law JDH has been redesignated. It will continue to be a remand facility but will also be a training school for sentenced offenders. That means potentially longer stays, up to two years in some cases.

The capacity remains the same — 20. Phillips expects a 50-50 split in remand and sentenced population.

The physical improvements don't mean the JDH will have any greater success in getting juveniles to mend their ways.

"The object of containment is not rehabilitation," says Phillips. "Institutions never cure people. They are not a solution. They can provide no more than protection for the community.

"All we can do is try to minimize the damage containment can have on the kids."

TOWN TALK

Visitors to the Royal London Wax Museum here will have to wait a while before they see Prime Minister Joe Clark in the ranks of the celebrities.

Clark must survive the opening rounds of parliamentary debate before he is considered for inclusion in the museum.

If he does, a Tussaud's expert in London will take one of his suits, note his exact measurements, weight and height and begin work on the effigy and a duplicate will be sent to the Victoria museum.

Although the process will take at least three months, Clark shouldn't be discouraged — an effigy of Trudeau wasn't made until November, 1969 — 19 months after he took office as prime minister.

Veteran travellers on B.C. ferries are wondering when the ferry corporation will get around to replacing its ancient chairs.

The chairs, says one passenger, aren't comfortable enough to even doze in.

He wonders why the corporation can't break down and buy aircraft-style chairs with adjustable backs. And he won't buy the argument that such chairs would take up too much room.

"Ferry trips for people who make them on a regular basis are a big yawn. If you don't want to read one of the blah magazines they sell, there's nothing to do but shut your eyes and pray for journey's end," he said.

The high number of people who attended the Victoria Juvenile Detention Home open house last week didn't come as any surprise to Bernice Yates, staff member in charge of volunteer programs.

Yates says interest in juvenile problems, particularly among young adults, has mushroomed in the past year.

Nowhere is the trend more clearly demonstrated than the volunteer force attached to the JDH.

Last year there were between 50 to 60 active members. Now there are 96, making it the largest volunteer group in the corrections system in the province.

Two-thirds of the volunteers are under the age of 35 and most of them are men.

Yates says the volunteers put in thousands of hours of work, assisting staff with in-house programs, visiting inmates, and helping look after juveniles when they are released from custody.

City's jobless dips

The Victoria unemployment rate in September was 6.5 per cent, down from 8.1 per cent in the same month last year, the local Canada Employment Centre said today.

The figures represent actual unemployment and are not seasonally adjusted. The rate compares with an actual rate of 6.8 per cent for British Columbia.

The local Canada Employment Centre had 8,260 people on it rolls as looking for work in September, down from 8,380 in the same month last year.

During September, there were 899 new jobs listed at the centre, up from 870 in September, 1978, manager Wally Pickering said today.

Sturrock eyes reform

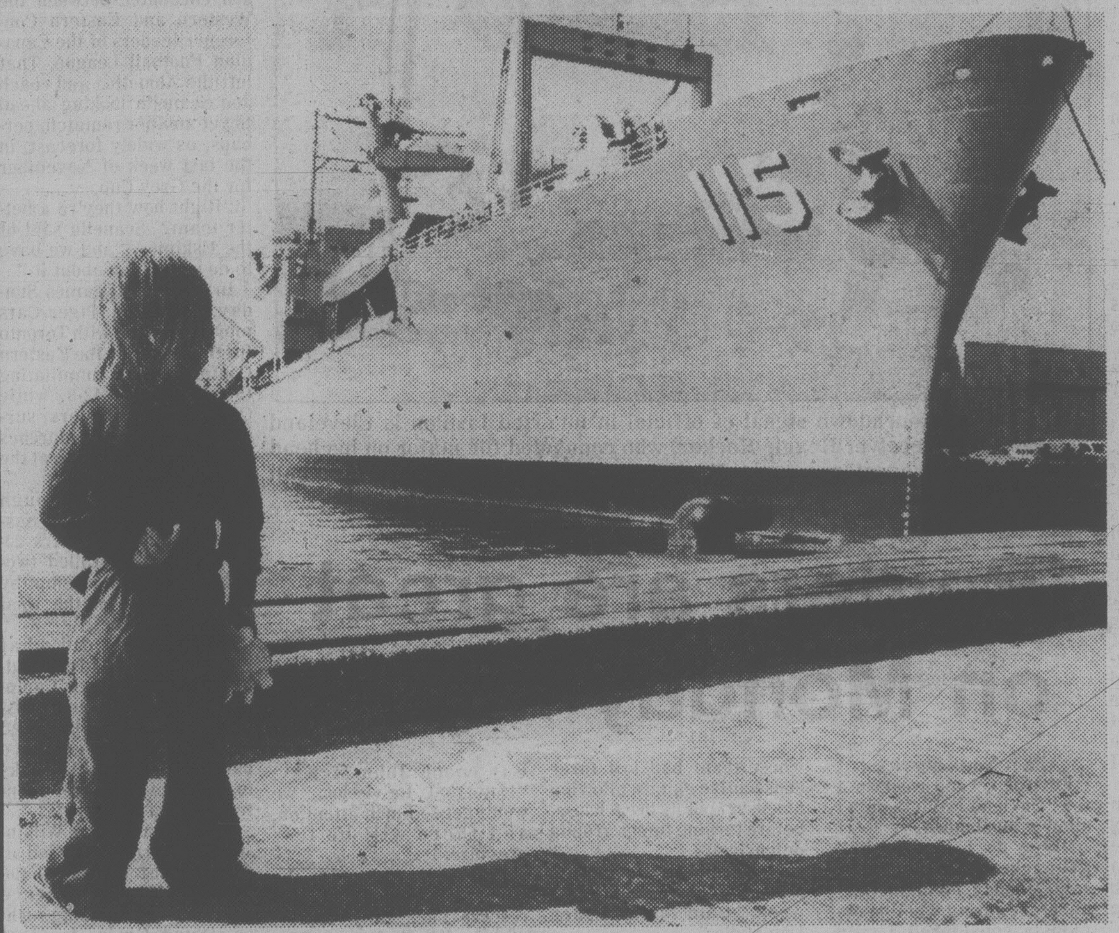
Saanich Ald. Howard Sturrock is running for re-election to council on a platform of administrative reform at city hall and greater progress on municipal planning, he said today.

"My major interest is in making progress with the community plan," Sturrock said in an interview.

The "broad brush" community plan for the whole municipality is completed, and now Saanich will work on more detailed plans for neighborhoods, said Sturrock.

Sturrock said much of the disagreement that has plagued Saanich lately is the result of confusion over planning for the future.

He also said he supports a change at city hall to the manager system, under which all department heads would report to council through a municipal manager acting as chief of staff. Victoria uses this system.



LURE OF THE SEA could be going through this youngster's mind while looking over USS Mobile, a cargo and troop carrier that was open to the public on the weekend at Ogden Point. Mobile was one of several U.S. warships to dock at Ogden and Esquimalt following Kernel Potlach II exercises involving 40,000 Canadian and American servicemen off the north end of Vancouver Island last week. More than 1,200 Canadian soldiers and U.S. marines splashed ashore to establish beachheads on the Island's northern tip during mock amphibious landings. (John McKay photo).

Fleet work on fire

Memo to the U.S. navy:

You can come back and play fireman any time.

Four sailors are credited with extinguishing a fire Sunday night that caused $3,000 damage to the Beaconville Apartments, 605 Douglas.

Deputy chief Fred Severson said today they spotted smoke coming from suite No. 5 from their room next door at the Queen Victoria Inn and went to the rescue about 7:20 p.m. after turning in the alarm.

They broke down the door and used a hose connected to the building's standpipe to put out the fire, but didn't stay around to give their names to the fire department, said Severson.

They were crew members on the four vessels that took part in the Kernel Potlatch war games on northern Vancouver Island last week. The ships left Ogden Point this morning for another three days of exercises. All are stationed in California.

Maggie 'a pigsty' for crew

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Calling crew accommodations aboard the Princess Marguerite "a real pigsty," the union representative for officers sailing aboard the old vessel has rejected another union's plea that the ship not be scrapped.

Leo Gray, business agent for the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, was reacting to union leader Neil Hindle's suggestion that the Marguerite should be saved.

Hindle is Victoria business agent for the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Blacksmiths, Forgers and Helpers. He was commenting on Transportation Minister Alex Fraser's announcement that the ship should be scrapped.

Hindle said Fraser's announcement was a betrayal to Victorians who consider the Marguerite, launched in 1948, a heritage vessel.

"I don't know who Hindle's talking for," Gray said, "but it's certainly not the Canadian Merchant Guild."

"That ship was built in the days when, after they'd finished a ship, they said, 'Oh, where do we put the crew? Down the glory hole.' "

"I know it's a very nostalgic ship," Gray said. "It's fine to be a nostalgia and antique buff if you don't have to sail in the goddam thing."

Gray said he's sailed in some of the world's great ships, including the Queen Mary, so he has firsthand knowledge of how bad crew accommodations can be.

While he appreciates Hindle's concern for the shipbuilding industry here and unemployment, Gray's first concern is decent accommodation for his union's members.

"I'm sure he means well, but I'm sure he hasn't given any thought to conditions for the crew."

He suggested that anyone thinking of supporting any bid to save the Marguerite should first tour the crew accommodations.

The ship made its final run Monday. An overload Sunday on the return trip to Seattle resulted in several passengers being placed on the Coho and bussed to their destination from Port Angeles.

Detox centre opposition puzzle to Salvation Army

The Salvation Army said today it can't understand why merchants in the Old Town section of Victoria are opposed to the new alcoholic detoxification centre planned as part of its new $3 million headquarters on lower Yates.

Capt. William Merritt said all zoning and design requirements of city hall have been met and the project is going ahead.

"The city council has approved. The advisory panels have approved. We have the money. It looks like it's going ahead.

"We've been going at this for five years."

The newly-formed Victoria's Old Town Association met Saturday and 105 merchants signed a petition asking council to hold a public hearing on the question.

Spokesman Jim Bennett said Saturday the merchants have no quarrel with the Salvation Army.

"We are not opposed to the main part of the project, namely the new store, the warehouse complex and the residence for elderly men," he said.

"But we are concerned that the location of a treatment centre for alcoholics should not be allowed to proceed in the Old Town."

Capt. Merritt said the Salvation Army is spending more money on design for this project than on any other Army building in Canada.

"We've never put up a building or a program that has downgraded the neighborhood," he added.

He also cleared up one apprehension about the 64-bed centre — only five will be used for detoxification itself. The rest will be for men in the Army's rehabilitation program.

And he noted that while the present entrance to the treatment centre — the Harbor Light building — is at 516 Yates, between a posh French restaurant and the headquarters of the Capital Regional District, the new Harbor Light will front on Johnson.

Some merchants have suggested the centre be established in a rural district or in a city-owned building in another area.

"The petitioners feel city council and the city administration acted hastily and without proper forethought in the granting of a building permit for this particular project," he said.

The association doesn't want the detoxification centre to become an election issue, he said, but wants the matter aired at a public hearing.

Weathergard not involved

A Times story last week mistakenly used the name Weatherguard to identify a cellulose insulation product whose reliability had been questioned by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

The correct name of the product was Weatherwedge and there is no connnection between it and the Weathergard Shop group of insulation contractors on Vancouver Island, whose Therm-attic cellulose fibre insulation has passed CMHC specification tests.

The Weatherwedge material, manufactured by PNW Fibretex Industries Ltd. of Langley has had its acceptance fully restored by CMHC. This product is also sold in the Victoria area.

Weaver moves left against Bucs

BALTIMORE (AP) — A week ago, Jim Palmer suggested that southpaw Mike Flanagan, Baltimore's biggest winner, ought to be the Orioles' opening pitcher in the American League playoffs.

Earl Weaver, using managerial perogative, filed that idea away and handed the baseball to Palmer instead.

Now, with the Orioles opening the World Series against Pittsburgh tonight, Palmer's advice will be followed and Flanagan will be the Baltimore starter. The fact that reports from club scouts Jim Russo and Bill Werle emphasized the Pirates' left-handed hitters was coincidental.

Weaver hopes Flanagan, the top winner in the majors with 23 victories this season, can neutralize Pittsburgh's Dave Parker, Willie Stargell and Omar Moreno, all left-handed hitters and all vital parts of the Pirates' attack.

With Flanagan on the mound, Pittsburgh manager Chuck Tanner will switch two other starters to add right-handed bats to his lineup. Rookie Steve Nicosia will catch in place of lefty-swinging Ed Ott and Bill Robinson will play left field.

The Pirates' starting pitcher in the opener will be lanky right-hander Bruce Kison, who won 13 games.

Kison is no stranger to the Orioles, who met him in 1971, when these two teams last played in the World Series. Kison was a rookie that year and won a game in relief.

Pittsburgh won that series in seven games.

The most valuable player was the late Roberto Clemente.

Neither the Orioles or Pirates have been back to the World Series since and both teams have changed in composition since they last met.

Of the Pirates, only first baseman Stargell, who was the left fielder then, reserve catcher Manny Sanguillen, a regular then, and Kison remain from the 1971 club.

Baltimore's holdovers are Palmer, who'll start the second game, and shortstop Mark Belanger, who remains one of the best gloves in the business at his position.

Opposing Palmer in the second game will be ex-American Leaguer Bert Blyleven, who won 12 games and pitched the pennant clincher for the Pirates.

Weaver will switch back to the southpaw strategy for the third game, with Scott McGregor, who pitched the clincher for the Orioles in the AL playoffs against California Angels, going against John Candelaria, Pittsburgh's top winner during the regular season.

The Pirates eliminated Cincinnati Reds in three straight games to win the National League pennant. The Orioles beat the Angels 8-0 Saturday, with McGregor tossing a six-hitter, to take their series 3-1.

Pat Kelly hit a three-run homer for the Orioles in the seventh inning when Baltimore broke the game open with five runs.

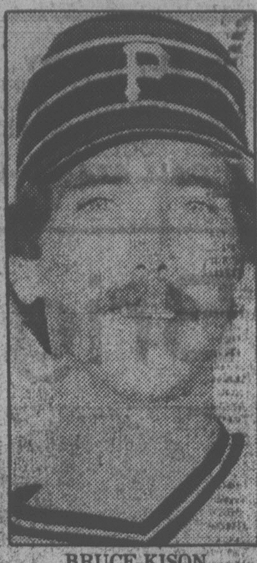
Designated hitters won't be used in the World Series, and Weaver said that "does something to our offence."

He said Lee May, who had 19 homers and 69 runs batted in as a designated hitter, would be relegated to pinch-hit duty.

The Orioles, known mostly for pitching and defence, actually outhomered the Pirates 181-149 during the regular season.

The DH is used every other year in the Series, and last year, when the Yankees beat Los Angeles Dodgers, New York DH Reggie Jackson had nine hits in 23 at bats with two home runs and eight runs batted in. The Dodgers' main DH, Lee Lacy, went 2-for-14.

Tonight's game will be televised over Channels 2, 3, 4 and 6 starting at 5:30 p.m. PDT.



BRUCE KISON . . . Pittsburgh starter

Odds say Orioles; computer says Bucs

Times News Services

It all depends on what you believe.

For those who use money, Baltimore Orioles are officialy listed as 6-5 favorites to win the World Series opener and are given a slight edge in the Series because of four games scheduled in Baltimore.

But if a computer is your toy, take Pittsburgh.

A computer befriended by a team of researchers at Johns Hopkins and Yale universities has given 7-6 odds the Pirates will top Baltimore Orioles.

The computer was fed exhaustive material.

Researchers Thomas Lamb and Joyce Kim began the project 18 months ago, setting up a model using baseball from all the way back to the 1950s.

The computer, broke the teams down into 10 types, all of which have won a Series, judged the Pirates and Orioles on how well their players fit together, rating the teams' respective talents in fielding, pitching and hitting, etc.

And it came out Pirates.

Meanwhile in Pittsburgh, the National League champions voted one-quarter shares of the World Series money to their two batboys and another youth who works in their locker room. Each will receive $4,000 to $7,000, depending on whether Pittsburgh wins or loses.

With Pittsburgh leading 6-1 in the seventh inning of Friday's clincher with Cincinnati, some Pirate wives climbed atop a cement wall behind home plate and disco danced to the team's theme song, We Are Family.

Fans cheered, but the Pirates had mixed reactions.

"I thought it was something they deserved," said Willie Stargell. "They're mother and father most of the time. To look up there and see them letting go, I was very happy."

But Bill Madlock and Tim Foli saw it differently. They remembered the day before when Baltimore jumped to a 9-1 lead and then held on to defeat California 9-8 in the American League playoffs.

"All I kept thinking was that it wasn't over yet," said Madlock.

Though he earned a victory and a save in relief during the National League playoffs, pitcher Don Robinson of the Pittsburgh Pirates says he still had a shoulder problem. But Robinson is optimistic. "I've been to 12 doctors, and they've given me 12 different types of diagnoses," he said. "Maybe I'm okay."

In Chicago it was announced that manager Tony LaRussa, who guided the team for the final 54 games of the 1979 American League baseball season, has been signed to manage the club in 1980. Team spokesman Don Unferth said LaRussa, 35, signed a one-year contract.

In Texas it was revealed that Texas Rangers and New York Yankees have completed the Mickey Rivers-Oscar Gamble baseball deal, with Texas getting three minor league right-handed pitchers and giving away a minor league left-hander and right-hander.

Esks batter Alouettes, Ticats humiliate Argos

By Canadian Press

It seems that whenever the Edmonton Eskimos and Montreal Alouettes tangle, one or the other is thirsting for revenge.

The Eskimos slaked their thirst in grand style Monday, dismantling the Alouettes 47-6 in the last regular-season encounter between the Western and Eastern Conference leaders of the Canadian Football League. That left the Alouettes and coach Joe Scanella looking ahead to yet another rematch, perhaps, as widely forecast, in the last week of November for the Grey Cup.

"Right now they're a better team," Scanella said of the Eskimos, "and we have to do something about it."

In other CFL games Sunday, Hamilton Tiger-Cats moved into a tie with Toronto for third place in the Eastern Conference by humiliating the Argonauts 42-3, while Calgary Stampeders survived two Winnipeg marches late in the game to defeat the Blue Bombers 18-13.

Sunday, Ottawa Rough Riders edged winless Saskatchewan Roughriders 20-19, thanks to a failed two-point conversion attempt by Saskatchewan on the final play of the game.

"Everybody did what they're supposed to do," Edmonton coach Hugh Campbell said after his team displayed the same balanced offensive and defensive punch that carried the Esks to the Grey Cup over Montreal last year.

Quarterbacks Tom Wilkinson and Warren Moon led an attack that rolled up 496 yards, while the defence held the CFL's leading rusher, David Green, to 68 of Montreal's 268 total yards.

Green scored the Als' only TD in the fourth quarter.

Edmonton collected three touchdowns passing — two by Waddell Smith and a 77-yard pass-and-run effort by Brian Kelly — two TDs rushing and another on Larry Highbaugh's 55-yard return of a Joe Barnes interception.

Smith also scored on a 26-yard run and John Konihowski caught a 10-yard touchdown pass from Moon in the third quarter. Dave Cutler kicked six conversions, a field goal and a single. Punter Hank Ilesic contributed a single.

The Esks, who had suffered their first loss of the season last week in Calgary, improved their record to 10-1-2 and took a three-point lead over the second-place B.C. Lions in the WFC.

The Alouettes are three points ahead of Ottawa.

In Hamilton, the playoff-hungry Tiger-Cats sunk their claws deep into the Argonauts to hand Toronto its sixth loss in a row.

The biggest crowd of the year at Ivor Wynne Stadium, 27,293, watched as quarterback Tom Clements played havoc with the Toronto secondary while fullback Neil Lumsden scored three touchdowns against his former team-mates.

In Winnipeg, the Blue Bombers marched to the Calgary three-yard line twice in the fourth quarter, only to lose the ball on downs the first time and run out of time the second.

The final try by Winnipeg came after Ricky Wesson intercepted a pass by Calgary quarterback Ken Johnson and the Blue Bombers marched from their own 38-yard line to the Stampeder three.

On the game's last play, defensive back Robert Sparks hit receiver Brian Gervais in the end zone just as a pass from Dieter Brock arrived, thus breaking up the play and sealing the Calgary victory.

Tagge ailing again

Times News Services

Quarterback Jerry Tagge of British Columbia Lions has re-injured his left knee and is considered a doubtful starter for next Sunday's Canadian Football League game against Ottawa Rough Riders.

The injury occurred in practice Friday, the second day of drills in full strip for Tagge, who has been sidelined for three games because of a blood clot on the knee.

Also doubtful for the Ottawa game is slotback Terry Bailey, who pulled a hamstring muscle in Edmonton Sept. 16 and has been used sparingly.

Raiders are great on Monday nights

Times News Services

For the second week in a row, Oakland Raiders didn't allow a touchdown.

"How do I explain it?" linebacker Ted Hendricks said Monday night in Oakland, answering what he obviously considered a silly question. "We played great defence, that's all."

Raiders beat Miami Dolphins 13-3 for their eighth consecutive Monday-night victory and made their 10-year record in the series, televised nationally in the U.S., 12-1-1 — best in the National Football League.

Hendricks intercepted a pass by Bob Griese and ran 23 yards for a touchdown. Rookie lineman Reggie Kinlaw sacked the Miami quarterback four times as the Raiders followed up impressively on their 27-3 victory over Denver Broncos a week earlier.

In another weekend highlight Sunday, the last of the unbeaten clubs dropped its first game as the previously winless New York Giants edged Tampa Bay Buccaneers, 17-14.

"That's quite a feat," said Oakland coach Tom Flores, whose team had lost three consecutive games, allowing at least 27 points in each loss, before turning things around defensively.

"Oakland mixed things up defensively, much like last week," said Miami coach Don Shula.

"We played some great football between the 20-yard lines, and that doesn't win football games," said Miami tackle Bob Kuechenberg.

Fullback Larry Csonka, whose 83 yards rushing gave him a season total of 350 — more than he gained all of last season with New York Giants — had similar thoughts.

"We made little mistakes, but they took on great magnitude," he said.

"We really didn't expect to go undefeated," said Tampa Bay coach John McKay. "Now that we've lost, we won't get so much attention, and there will be less pressure."

The Giants charged to the victory behind the running of reserve back Billy Taylor, making his first start. The win was the first for the Giants after five losses, while the Bucs had won five in a row.

Elsewhere, Pittsburgh Steelers rolled over Cleveland Browns 51-35, Denver Broncos blanked San Diego Chargers 7-0, Dallas Cowboys whipped Minnesota Vikings 36-20, Los Angeles Rams walloped New Orleans Saints 35-17, New England Patriots got by Detroit Lions 24-17 and Kansas City Chiefs edged Cincinnati Bengals, 10-7.

St. Louis Cardinals upset Houston Oilers 24-17, Philadelphia Eagles downed Washington Redskins 28-17, Chicago shut out Buffalo Bills 7-0, Seattle Seahawks outduelled winless San Francisco '49ers 35-24, Atlanta Falcons smothered Green Bay Packers 25-7 and Baltimore Colts nipped New York Jets, 10-8.

Canucks open with questions

Times News Services

Vancouver Canucks begin their 10th National Hockey League season tonight with just about as many question marks as when they skated into the league as an expansion franchise.

Six coaching changes and many trades later, the Canucks still are one of the weaker teams in the NHL. Vancouver gained just 63 points in 80 games last season in capturing a playoff berth in the weak Smythe Division.

Hope springs eternal on the West Coast, apparently, and better than 12,000 season tickets have been sold to fans who want:

— Another look at last year's all-rookie line of Thomas Gradin between Curt Fraser and Stan Smyl;

— A longer look at last year's injured trio of Glen Hanlon, Bill Derlago and Kevin McCarthy; — And a quick look at this season's new rookies, wingers Rick Vaive and Brent Ashton.

Canucks, under coach Harry Neale, will have one of the youngest teams in the NHL this season, with defenceman Dennis Kearns the only player over 30 years.

Neale is banking on the youthful enthusiasm of the Canucks to push them into challenging Chicago Black Hawks for first place in the division — and possibly holding off a charge from Winnipeg Jets and Edmonton Oilers, newcomers from the World Hockey Association.

The Canucks begin their 80-game schedule tonight in Vancouver's PNE Coliseum against another division rival, the equally-young St. Louis Blues.

During the exhibition season, when Vancouver's record was 3-4-2, Gradin was the team's leading scorer. The young Swede will again work between aggressive wingers Fraser and Smyl. Fraser, the Victoria Cougar graduate, has the strength to work the corners and Smyl the desire to control the front of the net.

Neale figures the Vancouver power play will be greatly improved with Derlago and McCarthy available. Derlago played only nine games last season before requiring knee surgery and McCarthy dressed only once after being acquired from Philadelphia, where he had a hip problem.

Hanlon returns to play goal after appearing in only 31 games last season before a knee injury put him on the sidelines in January. He had three shutouts and a goals-against average of 3.10 before his injury.

Vaive and Ashton were Vancouver's top draft choices in August and both have the necessary size to play the wing in the NHL.

Villeneuve posts dramatic victory

Times News Services

Gilles Villeneuve of Berthierville, Que., ended the 1979 Formula One racing season with an impressive victory in the U.S. Grand Prix at Watkins Glen, New York, to finish second in the world drivers championship standings.

The 27-year-old Ferrari driver scored his third triumph of the 15-race season Sunday in a tense and dramatic battle with the elements and 23 rivals in the 320-kilometre race.

Victory — plus second-place finishes in three of the previous four races — gave Villeneuve 47 points in the championship table, second only to the 51 points accumulated by South African Jody Scheckter, his Ferrari teammate.

Villeneuve, who spent more than an hour practising in heavy rain on Friday, saw his diligence pay off as he led virtually throughout the rain-soaked 59-lap race.

He surrendered the lead to a hard-driving Alan Jones of Australia only when he made a pit stop to change tires after the rain stopped halfway through the race.

Villeneuve, who had back-to-back victories in South Africa and the U.S. Grand Prix West earlier this year, took the lead right at the start, jumping ahead of the pole-sitting Jones's Williams machine.

"We went into turn one side by side and I very nearly lost it," Villeneuve said.

Jones, who won three of the previous four Grand Prix races for the Saudi Arabian-backed Williams team, chased the front-running Ferrari the rest of the day, slowly cutting into Villeneuve's early wide margin.

The 100,000 fans who ringed both sides of the hilltop course were deprived of a developing nose-to-tail duel between the Ferrari and Williams when Jones lost a wheel shortly after changing to dry-weather tires.

Villeneuve was not seriously challenged after Jones dropped out on the 36th lap and he coasted to victory, nursing an engine with low oil pressure.

Rene Arnoux of France drove a steady race in a Renault and finished second, 48.78 seconds behind Villeneuve, whose time was one hour, 52 minutes, 17.734 seconds for an average speed of 171.29 kilometres an hour.

Elsewhere in the world of auto racing, Cale Yarborough continues to trail Darrell Waltrip in National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing rankings despite winning the NAPA National 500.

With four races remaining in the season, Waltrip's 4,228 points have him 53 ahead of Richard Petty at 4,175. Bobby Allison is third with 4,007 and Yarborough fourth at 3,981.

Yarborough's win Sunday at the Charlotte Motor Speedway was his fourth of the NASCAR season.

He stayed doggedly near the front all afternoon and won the $300,625 event after leader Buddy Baker crashed about 50 laps from the finish.

Yaborough led for only one lap early in the race but he stayed in Baker's shadow until Baker's Chevrolet scraped the third turn wall and crashed into a retaining wall on lap 279.

Vikes, Bears settle for tie

Two of the three unbeaten squads in the Canada West University Athletic Association — University of Victoria Vikings and Alberta Golden Bears — maintained the status quo Saturday at Centennial Stadium.

Vikings, the defending conference champion and 1978 national runners-up, played to a 1-1 tie with the front-running Bears.

UVic coach Brian Hughes was unhappy with the single point with only two matches left in the schedule.

Bears lead the league with a 3-0-2 record and eight points. Calgary Dinosaurs are second at 2-0-3 and seven points while Vikings are a point back at 2-0-2.

"We played lousy," Hughes exclaimed. "We had the advantage most of the way but didn't capitalize. They didn't get a decent shot away most of the second half."

The match was scoreless at half time and UVic went ahead early in the second half when Rex Craig scored after an indirect free kick.

But Bears replied quickly when Rudy Bartholomew connected following another indirect free kick.

The CWUAA champion wins the right to host the Great Plains converence winner in a regional championship. In turn, the regional winner will stage the national final.

B.C. girls win overtime duel

WINNIPEG (CP) — British Columbia beat Ontario 2-1 in overtime Monday to win the Canadian women's field hockey championship.

But B.C.'s Sandy Tufnail tied the score as the clock neared the end of the 70 minutes of regulation time.

There was no scoring in the first overtime period of 7½ minutes. Debbie Smith got the winning goal in the 84th minute of play.

B.C. went through the tournament with six straight victories. Ontario had four wins, no ties and one loss.

Canadians trim Caribbean team

Canada's Davis Cup tennis team is home today after a successful first-round series in Kingston, Jamaica, against the Commonwealth Caribbean team.

Canada won the series 5-0 and will next meet Mexico in second-round play, Oct. 26-28 at Brantford, Ont.

In reverse singles Sunday, Joseph Brabanec Jr. of Vancouver beat Stewart Sarma of Jamaica 7-5, 6-3, 6-1, and Robert Bettauer of Vancouver topped Leo Rolle of the Bahamas, 6-1, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Canada clinched the series Saturday when the pair of Dale Power of Ottawa and Bettauer defeated John Antonus of the Bahamas and Rolle, 7-5, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5.

Saturday's clincher in the doubles was made possible after Power and Brabanec posted victories in Friday night's singles matches.

Power had little difficulty defeating Gewon Maharaj of Trinidad 6-2, 6-2, 6-4. Brabanec, whose father, Joseph Sr., is the team captain, battled for 4½ hours before subduing Antonus.

Brabenec, making his Davis Cup debut, lost the first set 18-20 in 2½ hours. The lengthy set resulted from the fact there are no tie-breakers in Davis Cup competition. He then swept the next three sets, 8-6, 6-3, 6-4.

In other Davis Cup play, Vitas Gerulaitis staged his second recovery in the 1979 Davis Cup tennis semi-final against Australia in Sydney on Monday, helping the United States reach the final against Italy in December.

Gerulaitis beat Australia's No. 1 player, John Alexander, 3-7, 6-4, 8-6, 6-2 to give the U.S. a 3-1 lead in the best-of-five series.

Later, John McEnroe, the U.S. Open champion, emphasized the Americans' superiority by beating Mark Edmondson 6-3, 6-4 in a concluding best-of-three-sets encounter, giving his country a 4-1 result.

Few people who saw the Americans' advance to the final would bet against them in the final against Italy.

Neal Fraser, the Australian team captain, said: "Over-all they were the better team. I congratulate them and I think they'll go on and win it."

His American counterpart, Tony Trabert, said: "We'll be fielding the same team and I think we can do it."

The semi-final produced many tense moments but none more so than in the opening match when Edmondson, ranked No. 72 in the world, held three match points in the third set against Gerulaitis, rated the world's fourth best.

However, the promise of a fairy-tale upset was dashed as Gerulaitis recovered dramatically and went on to win the six-hour, rain-affected marathon in five sets.

Gerulaitis, this year's U.S. Open runner-up to McEnroe, again had to come from behind in Monday's clincher against Alexander.

"After the first set he never really had any chances to break my serve," Gerulaitis said. "I just played a sloppy first set."

In the final match, McEnroe fell heavily in the second set when he tripped chasing an Edmondson croscourt forehand.

He received treatment for a cut eye before resuming play.

In Rome, Corrado Barazzutti downed 19-year-old Ivan Lendl 4-6, 6-1, 6-2, 3-6, 7-5 lead Italy over Czechoslovakia in the European zone series.

In a second match, Adriano Panatta beat Tomas Smid 6-3, 6-2 to give Italy a 4-1 series victory.

And in Lima, Uruguay completed a 4-1 win over Peru in their 1980 South American zone Davis Cup tennis qualifying series.

Massey clicks with late rally

WHEELING, W.Va. (AP) — Debbie Massey, rallying from a two-shot deficit with two holes to play, sank a six-foot par putt on the first playoff hole Sunday to defeat Betsy King and win the $100,000 Wheeling Classic.

Winning for just the second time in her Ladies' Professional Golf Association career, Massey denied King her first tour victory.

The victory, which was worth $15,000 to Massey, was her first in the U. S. although she won a 1977 tournament in Japan.

Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., ended at 228 after shooting a 76 to earn $762 and Dale Shaw of Victoria posted a 78 for a 236 total and earned $150.

Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., missed the cut with rounds of 84 and 75, while Sandra Post, the other Canadian in the starting field, withdrew after scoring a 78 Friday.

Graham blazing hot trail

Times News Services

Veteran Lou Graham, the hottest golfer on the pro tour since July, collected two birdies in his final four holes Sunday to win the $250,000 Texas Open in San Antonio by one stroke.

It was Graham's third tour title in the eight tournaments he's played since getting a new putter and disposing of his 1962 vintage irons in July — the first time he's switched irons in 17 years. Graham, now has won $167,000 of his total $190,000 haul this year since getting the new clubs.

Graham, 41, of Nashville, Tenn., shot a four-under-par 66 Sunday and finished at 12-under-par 268, a stroke ahead of Eddie Pearce, Bill Rogers and third-round leader Doug Tewell.

TV sports director dies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lorne Hassan, sports director at television station CKVU, has died at age 41.

Hard-biting flu bug fails to cool hot Cougar squad

While some of their temperatures are well above normal, Victoria Cougars continue to hold a hot hand in the Western Hockey League.

Hit by a bug that has affected the health of several players but bolstered by a pair of returnees, the Cougars chalked up their fourth straight victory Saturday night by defeating Seattle Breakers 5-2 before 2,816 fans at Memorial Arena.

Holdover wingers Bob Jansch and Greg Adams and rookie defenceman Len Dawes were forced to miss the game because influenza. Adams was the most seriously stricken and there were fears today that his illness may have developed into pneumonia.

In addition, rookie centre Mark Morrison and three defencemen — Robert Jacobson, Tony Feltrin and Ryan McAdams — played despite feeling below par.

Which made Mark Robinson and Brad Yachimec most welcome. Robinson, heading into his fourth season, returned late Friday from his tryout with Buffalo Sabres of the National League. Yachimec, who was brought up from the Alberta Junior League at the tag-end of last season, suffered broken ribs in a pre-season skating session.

Both were pressed into action.

Adding to coach Jack Shupe's juggling woes was the fact that referee Rob Schick ejected Victoria's Torrie Robertson and McAdams for their roles in a brawl which erupted in front of the Seattle bench early in the second period.

Alan Graves, Dan Held and Wayne Van Dorp of Seattle also were ejected.

But the Cougars responded with strong skating performance to chalk up their victory.

Robinson, joining Jacobson, Bob McGill and Feltrin in supplying a solid defence in front of rookie netminder Grant Fuhr, made an auspicious return. He drew three assists.

Feltrin, Robertson, Randy Zinn, Grant Rezansoff and Barry Pederson were the Victoria goal-getters. Graves and Mike Mesic scored Seattle's goals as Fuhr, making his first start on home ice, checked in with an excellent performance.

Shupe, pleased with the team's overall performance, gave his players two days off but they'll resume practice today in preparation for their next game — Saturday against New Westminster Bruins.

The Bruins, meanwhile, continue to flounder without the services of five players who were suspended by a court ruling as the result of a bench-clearing brawl with Portland Winter Hawks last March 22.

Westminster suffered its fourth and five straight losses, 9-2 and 4-1, at the hands of Portland at the weekend.

Amateurs score another win

Mike Turyk connects for 25th ace

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Vancouver Island's amateurs have pulled away from the professionals in their annual golf series for the Francis Winspear Trophy.

The 10-man amateur squad jumped off to take a 4-1 lead in Saturday's foursomes and then split the spoils, 5-5, in Sunday's singles to record a 9-6 victory in the seventh annual series at Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club.

Marty Richards and Don Gowan, both of the host club, and Dave Donaldson of Gorge Vale sparked the amateurs by winning both singles and foursomes matches. Uplands' Don Billsborough was the only professional to emerge with a clean slate.

Victory gives the amateurs, selected on the basis of points accumulated in various Island tournaments, a 4-2-1, won-lost-tied record.

Complete results (listing amateurs first):

Gulls, Braves win

Juan de Fuca King John Gulls administered the second beating to Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking over the holiday weekend with a 6-3 Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League victory Monday at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Saanich Braves topped the Truckers 12-2 Saturday at Lake Cowichan Arena.

Dave Holmwood sparked Gulls with three goals and singles were added by Barry Girbav, Ross Anderson and Frank Wendt. Rob Frost, Gary Matson and Brad Giles scored for Lake Cowichan.

Mike Bell of Baird's was the busiest goaltender with 37 stops while Mike Spiteri of Gulls blocked 25 shots.

On Saturday, Shawn Connors set the pace with four goals for Saanich, which enjoyed period leads of 3-1 and 7-1. Marty Irvine added three and single tallies were contributed by Brian Goodwin, Bruce Tuck, Ron Brooks, Keith Lidner and Dave Robbins.

Glen Smith and Brad Childs replied for Baird's.

Ron Allan blocked 29 shots on the Saanich goal while Scott Harnbrooke and Bell combined to make 32 saves for Truckers.

Bays chop Hornet lead

Oak Bay moved to within one point of first-place Saanich Hornets by coming from behind to beat the front-runners 35-30 in a Vancouver Island Junior "B" Football League game Sunday at Royal Athletic Park.

In the other game, Nanaimo tripped winless Cowichan 14-10 in the Hub City.

Mark Edgington set the pace for Oak Bay with two touchdowns and single majors were added by Scott Tuttle, Steve Percival and Dave Markussen. Dave Morrison kicked three conversions and Bays also had a safety.

Tom Graham scored two TDs for Saanich, which only had 19 players, while single majors came from Mark Townsend and Russ Hafer. Andy Moodie booted a field goal and four conversions.

Warren Paugh and Randy Barr, who also kicked both conversions, counted the Nanaimo touchdowns.

Keith Taylor, with a touchdown, field goal and single, took care of all scoring for Cowichan, which led 10-0 at half time.

Hornets still lead with eight points and are followed by Oak Bay (7), Nanaimo (6) and Cowichan (0).

Laz calls Affirmed best 'I ever saw'

By The Canadian Press

"Don't take anything away from Spectacular Bid," said trainer Laz Barrera after Bid's showdown Saturday with Affirmed. "The Bid is a heck of a horse, but Affirmed is a little bit better."

Barrera's Affirmed was three-quarters of a length better than Spectacular Bid at the end of the 1½-mile Jockey Club Gold Cup at New York's Belmont Park. The victory clinched Affirmed's second straight Horse-of-the-Year title and made the four-year-old colt, in Barrera's eyes, a little bit better than any horse, any time.

"I don't want to insult anybody or be called prejudiced, but I think this is the best horse I ever saw," said Barrera.

Affirmed, who won the Triple Crown in 1978, led most of the way in the $377,000 Gold Cup and held off Spectacular Bid in the stretch to win. Coastal was third.

On Monday at Belmont, Bowl Game, ridden by Jorge Velasquez got up in the last stride to win the $137,375 Man o'War Stakes. Native Courier, the longest shot in a field of four at 6-1, was second. Czaravich was third.

It was also announced that Coastal, the surprise winner of the Belmont Stakes, had been syndicated for $5.4 million and retired to stud. Coastal upset favored Spectacular Bid in the Belmont.

At Exhibition Park in Vancouver, Monday, Light Olympia, a 24-1 shot, won the $22,750 Ascot Graduation.

On Saturday, Tolita, owned by the Jawl Brothers of Victoria, won the $30,000-added Ballerina Handicap.

The California-bred covered the 1 1-8 miles in 1:50 1-5 and paid $6.90, $3.50 and $3 as second choice to Axe Me Dear. Palica paid $4 and $3.20 and Aunita Leswick returned $4.10.

At Newmarket, England, Topsy, owned by R. Moller and ridden by Lester Piggott, won the $57,640 Sun Chariot Stakes on Saturday by a four-length margin over Bonny Isle. Smartset, meanwhile, won the $61,820 Cambridgeshire Handicap.

At Paris, Three Troikas, a three-year-old filly, ended the superhorse claims of English Derby winner Troy by handing him his first defeat of the year Sunday in the $620,000 Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe.

Troy finished third, a length behind second-place Le Marmot, who was three lengths back of the winner. U.S.-trained-and-raced Noble Dancer, ridden by Jacinto Vasquez, never was within the first 10, nor was Argentine import Telescopico, ridden by jockey Sandy Hawley of Mississauga, Ont. American jockey Steve Cauthen had Two of Diamonds, an English three-year-old, in seventh place in the backstretch but the colt faded.

At Woodbine, Saturday, Glorious Song continued her belated bid to overhaul Kamar as Canada's leading three-year-old filly by winning the $36,050 Wonder Where Stakes.

The critics speak

"The Strada does everything well, excelling in handling, fuel economy and highway cruising."
Dan Proudfoot, Toronto Sun

Halifax Chronicle Herald
Auto test
by Richard Russell
Fiat, those people who provide Gilles Villeneuve with his Ferrari in Formula One, have done a complete rethink for the North American market and the result has to be one of the most completely rust-proofed cars for sale in North America.

This little devil has undercoating in places most cars don't even have paint. The car is built using a great deal of rust-proof zincrometal in critical areas; the car is then thoroughly under-coated at the factory before being shipped across the Atlantic.

When the cars arrive at Autoport they are once again undercoated by Fiat personnel. The plastic fender-liners are then installed and the car is as ready as any to face the elements.

To back it up, Fiat provides a three-year warranty against corrosion perforation, and to back up their faith in the very tough mechanical components they offer a two-year warranty against mechanical defects as well. This is the best warranty in the small car business.

So what is the car like to drive?

An absolute ball!

Typically Italian, the little wonder just begs to be driven. The 1500 cc engine is a jewel.

The engine is a very smooth little piece of work that started instantly at any temperature and idled as smoothly as anything in its class.

The Milton Tribune Homes, August 8, 1979
The Fast Lane
by Jim Kenzie
Typical of Italian design, the Fiat abounds with unusual touches. The square overall shape is relieved by a continuing round motif, that is seen in the door handles, heater controls, instruments, and even the door lock buttons. It gives the car an all-of-a-piece look, and is much more pleasant than an overabundance of straight, Teutonic lines.

FIRSTHAND REPORT—May 1979
by Michael Lamm
West Coast Editor
POPULAR MECHANICS
. . . extensive rustproofing and improved quality control put the Strada several leagues ahead of its predecessors. The body uses Zinchrometal in all rust-prone areas, as well as PVC undercoating and plastic inner fender liners. The fit and finish impressed me as top-quality throughout.

CAR AND DRIVER
. . . it underscores our contention that the Strada really is prime Car-of-the-Future material.

The only choice seems to be whether you choose to buy the Car of the Future now, or wait for the future. We think those of you inclined toward early conversion will find much comfort in this Fiat.

62 km/gal

The Toronto Sun
by DAN PROUDFOOT
You have an affair with a Fiat, you understand. You don't simply own it in the way you buy, drive and ultimately wave goodbye to other mass-produced automobiles.

Pure Fiat means more fun to drive. The gearshift is so light it feels as though you need only to use your little finger to progress through the five forward speeds. The brakes are a delight, sensitive and sure. The engine likes nothing better than high speed operation.

New-car smell
The car even comes with the characteristic Fiat new-car smell, a kind of essance d'gusto. But the Italian company also has broken new ground, for the Strada offers exceptional ride and quiet at touring speeds compared both to earlier Fiats and to the competition.

MOTOR TREND July 1979
by Bob Nagy
When driving cross-country, the one facet of an interior that very quickly asserts its presence is the seating. The Strada merits very high marks in this area.

What was especially noteworthy was that even at freeway speeds, the Strada, which weighed in at just under 2100 pounds, practically ignored the 30-40 mph gusts that were causing obvious problems for many other larger and heavier vehicles.

In addition to its outstanding stability, that Strada delivered a remarkably quiet ride.

Friday, June 1, 1979—Santa Cruz Sentinel
We found the brakes to be exceptional. It was our impression that they are the best offered in this field. They are vacuum-assisted disc up front and drums in the rear.

The econobox class is probably the most competitive in today's automotive marketplace. And the Fiat Strada has much to offer any buyer. To overlook the Strada when shopping for a new car in this class would be a mistake.
By Arnold Wechter

ROAD TEST/Oct. '79
Begs to be driven hard on serpentine roads. Has ride that swallows dips and bumps, and "easy chair" seat and stickability rivalling some sports cars. Designed to carry 4 and does so spaciously, along with lots of luggage. Top performer of these 5 cars. It's a real "fun car." Rating: A+.

ROAD & TRACK—September 1979
The Strada amassed a whopping 11 firsts (more than any other car) in the areas of ride and handling, braking, body structure, front and rear seating, ease of folding the latter, luggage and loading, the shopping bag contest, quietness and ingress/egress.

The Strada's long suit is interior practicality, an important set of criteria for cars of this class. Comments like "Love these large, comfortable seats," speak for themselves . . . its rear seat bottom can be tipped forward to increase carrying capacity. The cargo area is tall enough, for instance, to carry full shopping bags out of sight.

DENVER, COLO. POST
by Bud Wells
A test of a sharp-looking two-door hatchback showed the Strada's best features to be good handling characteristics, especially in the snow; comfortable seating with lots of legroom and a strong-performing engine.

AUTOWEEK FEBRUARY 19, 1979
by Jim Gandy
The Strada, by contrast, feels firm, stable, and predictable. Through a judicious combination of spring rates and shock valving, Fiat has made the 2050 lb. Strada give the driver the impression of a car weighing 3000 lbs.

The impression of weight translates to an exceptionally comfortable car to drive for long stretches.

Based on laboratory tests using Transport Canada test method. Actual consumption will vary. Urban winter consumption will be significantly greater. Wests protect unbeaten record

Victoria West kept ahead of the first division pack in the Vancouver Island Soccer League by defeating Meston's Auto Body 3-0 in a battle of two previously unbeaten sides Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

In other first division battles Sunday, Oak Bay and Gorge played to a scoreless deadlock at Heywood Avenue Park, Castways and Nanaimo fought to a 3-3 tie at Topaz Park and Powell River Villas won their first game of the season with a 3-1 decision over visiting Victoria Athletics.

Wests boosted their unbeaten string to three matches with the victory and jumped one point ahead of idle runner-up University of Victoria Vikings, the only other undefeated team in the division.

Mestons, who earned promotion to the first division this season, had been unbeaten with three ties.

Rob Williams opened scoring for Vic West early in the first half and counted another at 57 minutes, both on rebounds, and Bob Duncan finished things off with a close-in shot at 76 minutes.

Jim De Goede recorded the shutout for Wests.

At Heywood, Gorge had most of the play behind the offensive force of Howie Kirk and Mike Collis but couldn't get past a solid Oak Bay defence keyed by Jack Magi and Mike McNally-Dawes. Steve Akan of Oak Bay and John Iruretagoyena of Gorge recorded the shutouts.

Don Attig scored twice and Mark Sprees added a single to give Nanaimo a 3-1 lead at half time.

Brian Heaps thwarted the up-Islanders by scoring twice for Castaways in the second half. Colin Ayers fired the first-half single.

At Powell River, Bob Orchison counted before the break for Villas and Phil Galigos and Brian Gomez added singles early in the second half. Keith Bridge averted a shutout for Athletics by scoring with six minutes remaining.

Ed Coleman never bothered to vote until he was a century old, but now he's a stand-up-and-be-counted supporter of participation in democracy. Coleman, 103, walked four kilometres in 4½ hours to reach the polls for municipal elections in Spartansburg, S.C. "I'd walk about as far as that mailbox over there," he said pointing to the box about 25 metres away. "Then I'd sit a spell, get my breath and go again."

Alfred Newcombe has voted for more than 80 years. Now that he is 102 the Montreal resident recalls that in 1877, Rutherford Hayes became 19th president of the U.S., Queen Victoria was proclaimed Empress of India and the Canadian Confederation was 10 years old. Today, the man whose memory spans two centuries spends his time cheering the Montreal Alouettes on television.

Folks in Baton Rouge won't be able to vote for None of The Above on Oct. 27. He won't be on the ballot after all. "Well, until I can get justice, I just hope the folks remember to vote for old Luther Devine Knox for governor," said Above, who lost a court fight to have his catchy new name placed on the ballot. Above — also known as L.D. Knox — decided voters should have the choice.

Former U.S. president Richard Nixon has withdrawn from an agreement to buy a $925,000 apartment on New York's Fifth Avenue, a lawyer for the owner of the apartment said. The lawyer representing Abraham Hirschfeld gave no further details. Residents of the building had filed a suit claiming the presence of U.S. Secret Service personnel guarding Nixon would disrupt their lives.

Families who lived on the polluted Love Canal near Niagra Falls and who now are seeking damages from the Hooker Chemicals Corp. have become "the enemy" in a scenario reminiscent of Vietnam, says Jane Fonda after touring the area and speaking to some 3,500 people on the problem. "The same chemicals we used in Vietnam are buried here and destroying you," she said.

Actor Jimmy Stewart's remedy for what ails the U.S. is simple: Lower your voices. If not, he says, "I'm afraid we're going to shout the country to death."

Dear Abby:

You had a letter criticizing women who needlepoint or knot while attending meetings, visiting with friends or whatever.

I wish you had pointed out that doing something with one's hands, whether it is needlepoint, knitting, crocheting or embroidery, does not reduce one's ability to listen or converse.

At a recent gathering of the girls, someone asked me what I was knitting. A dishrag, I replied.

'Humph,' she grunted, 'what a waste of time!'

I just looked up and said, 'When I get through I'm going to have a dishrag. What are you going to have? (She graciously admitted that I had a point.)

I'm enclosing the dishrag as a gift for you.

Paula St. P.

Dear Paula:

Thanks for the dishrag. It wiped me out!

Dear Abby:

I am program chairman of our PTA, and I would like to start off with something especially meaningful pertaining to children since this is the Year of The Child. Can you come to my rescue?

Dear Faithful:

How's this? 'A child is a person who is going to carry on what you have started. He is going to sit where you are sitting, and when you are gone, attend to those things which you think are important. You may adopt all the policies you please, but how they are carried out depends on him.'

Dear Abby:

A reader asked if a bride walks up the aisle or down the aisle, and you said she walks down the aisle to greet her groom, and they walk up the aisle together after they're married.

Wrong! Actually the bride walks down the nave!

The nave is that large separation in the centre of the church dividing the church in half. The aisles are on the sides.

Dear Nit:

Thanks. I stand corrected. I confess to never having heard of nave (Naive?)

A tame ape needs some good caulked shoes

The action jobs dictate their own specialized items of clothing for the men who work on them. Denim waist 'overhalls' were the cowhand's standard wear long before they found universal acceptance as blue jeans. His chaps, his pointy-toed boots, his sombrero — even his kerchief which served as dust-cheater, cold-breaker and sweat-rag — evolved from the demands of his work.

The same holds true for the British Columbia coast logger, although I didn't realize that when I first went into the woods in the glory-years of the Shay steam locie and the wooden spar tree.

It was summer, and the crew had shifted to warm-weather gear, their winter raintests slung over rafters in the bunkhouses to wait until late fall forced a growling return to them.

At first, viewing the scene with a city boy's eyes, I found the logger's personal rigging outlandish.

What was the point, for instance, in heavy, spiked boots when rubber soles would hold equally well on dry log-surfaces?

Why the bobtailed cotton shirt worn with the tails out, the high-pocket pants that never got washed, and the combination of belt and sturdy suspenders that held them up?

As water-boy to the gods, charged with keeping an eye out for spot-fires started by locomotive or donkey-engine stacks, I speedily and painfully learned.

Floundering about in a chaos of logging slash, I found that my smooth-soled clodhopper boots were not only clumsy but miserably inadequate when it came to providing traction at need.

Also, I learned in a matter of minutes under the blazing logging-country sun that a shirt worn tucked neatly inside the pants was insufferably hot. And my pants, the legs rolled into cuffs, fouled on snags, stubs and vines with drastic results.

The side-push considered me with a saturine grin, where I sprawled with skinned knees and elbows between logs after my latest misadventure.

"Listen, punk," he said, "you better get calk-shoes before you bust your neck!"

In the home bunkhouse that might, I aired my woes. Calked boots bought on credit at the camp commissary would gobble at least half my first monthly pay cheque, already reduced to $28 by the dollar-a-day board deduction.

Ernie, an amiable Swede whom I'd helped frame a letter in English to a down-coast girl, listened to my plaints with a grin. Then he reached under his bunk and hauled out a pair of old, stitch-broken calked boots.

"Here," Ernie said. "If they fit, you can have them."

The boots fitted. Ernie showed me how to tie the laces with the logger's knot that never catches or slips. Those boots made the difference between treacherous going and secure footing.

Even though worn, the caulks gripped like cat's claws. If I jumped for a log, it was in the certainty that I'd remain anchored when I landed. The high, incurved heel never hung up; the rigid construction was a safeguard against turned or sprained ankles.

Also, their construction made them as close to waterproof as it's possible for all-leather footwear to come.

At the commissary, I got myself blue denim waist overalls which I duly stagged, a pair of sturdy police braces to hold them up and a striped bobtail shirt to flap outside them.

The matter of why loggers never washed their work pants puzzled me until an old Tame Ape expalined it.

"What you need when you're gallopin' around in the jungles is protection," he told me. "You wash those pants, you're gonna take the stiffenin' out of them and the resin that's been ground in. They won't protect you."

The heavy leather rigging gloves that loggers wore also puzzled me. They came from the commissary with little toggles at the wrists, to close the tops. The first act of a man with a new pair of gloves was to cut those toggles off.

One bunkhouse evening when Ernie the Swede was thus employed, I asked my inevitable why.

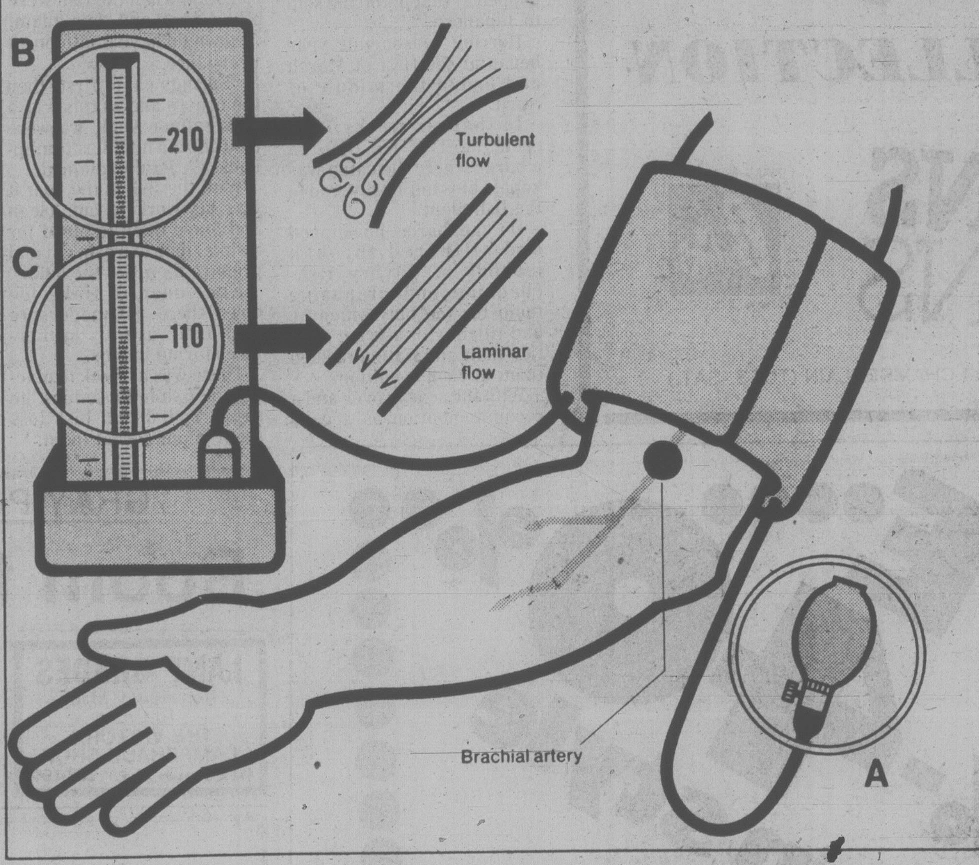
"Leave the toggles in," my mentor explained, "an' some day a wire jagger in the riggin will foul them." While he spoke, he was tying the freed toggles through the air-vent holes in the side of his raintest hat. "Then you've had it!"

"Yeah", I acknowledged, "but why are you tying them in your hat?"

Ernie gave me a pitying look. "No need to waste them," he said.

One invaluable item of logger dress was still to come. That was the hard hat — the skull-saver without which no man who works in the woods is now considered properly clad!

New theories on the silent killer



How blood pressure is measured

A Blood pressure is usually measured by observing how many millimeters a column of mercury rises as a result of the pressure applied when an artery is squeezed with an inflatable cuff. The brachial artery is most often used.

B The reading is given in two figures separated by a slash. The higher pressure, called systolic, is taken when blood rushes through the arteries impelled by heart muscle contraction. A systolic pressure of 210 would be dangerously high. A normal man or woman of middle or late 50s would register roughly 139.

C Diastolic blood pressure is measured in the lull when the heart is relaxing after a beat. The healthy middle-aged person would probably have a diastolic pressure of about 84.

By HAROLD SCHMECK
New York Times

NEW YORK — High blood pressure, "the silent killer," may sometimes be a treacherous killer as well, actually making the victim's world seem more comfortable while the stage is being set for disaster.

This new concept could help explain why some humans develop high blood pressure and what could be done about it. Based on a broad range of studies involving humans and animals, scientists hypothesize that some people learn unconsciously to raise their blood pressure because the higher pressure helps relieve the pains and anxieties of life.

Support for the hypothesis was found recently in experiments with rats by a research group at Rockefeller University and at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. The experiments showed that the animals with high blood pressure were slower to avoid a painful stimulus than rats whose pressure was normal. The difference appeared to lie simply in the animals' perception of the discomfort. The "noxious stimuli" evidently seemed less intense, or less important, to the animals when their blood pressure was high.

Hypertension — persistent high blood pressure — is a major contributor to death from stroke and heart disease and tends to reduce life expectancy if untreated.

The new hypothesis was developed by Dr. Barry R. Dworkin, a physiological pyschologist at Rockefeller who, with others, has found that animals and humans can be taught to change their blood pressure through the manipulation of their bodies' feedback mechanisms.

Part of this feedback system is focused on a set of nerves attached to major arteries of the neck and chest. These nerves sense the pressure of blood flowing from the heart and send signals back to the heart, blood vessels and brain when the pressure gets too high. In response to the signals the heart beats slower, blood vessels relax somewhat and blood pressure can be lowered to normal.

The same pressure sensors in the neck that respond to an increase in blood pressure also send signals to a part of the brainstem called the reticular formation and tell the brain, in effect, to calm down. The reticular formation is a key center whose destruction causes deep coma. But less drastic manipulations, by way of the key nerves in the neck, can also have powerful effects.

For example, dogs can be put to sleep by manipulating the carotid sinus, the region of the carotid arteries where the key pressure receptors are located. Agitated "neurotic" behavior can be more easily produced in rats if the nerves between the blood pressure sensors and brain are cut.

There have also been reports that women of the island of Bali massage their husbands' necks — the carotid sinuses specifically — to put them to sleep.

In the feedback experiments on humans, patients were given a signal showing when the blood pressure went above or below a certain level. Given such continual signals, a patient could often learn to make a desired change by trial and error even without knowing what it was specifically that produced the change. But most of the research teams that have tried this have been disappointed by the results of the method in actually treating high blood pressure on a long-term basis. Part of the reason, the scientists at Rockefeller University believe, is that training in the laboratory for hours or even a few days is simply no match for the continual bombardment of cues to raise blood pressure from the patient's whole outside life experience.

Dr. Neal E. Miller of Rockefeller University, one of the pioneers in studying biofeedback in humans and animals, said an estimated 30 percent or so of people taking drugs to control high blood pressure say that the drugs make them feel agitated.

"Those people would fit in very nicely with the hypothesis," he said.

What constitutes high blood pressure varies somewhat with age, but in general repeated readings that stay above 150-100 — which is a measure of pressure in the arteries during a contraction of the heart and during relaxation — are considered cause for concern in a person who is young or middle-aged. In some cases the cause of high blood pressure is known and thus could not be explained by the hypothesis drawn by Dworkin. For example, damage to the kidneys can produce it.

In the largest category, however, the condition is called "essential hypertension," meaning that the cause is unknown. The condition is often called "the silent killer" because it produces no early warning symptoms at all.

The new experiments suggest that the harm may be even more insidious than that. High blood pressure may sometimes even have a reassuring effect, unconsciously leading a person to elevate his or her blood pressure and keep it high as a means of coping with the unpleasant sensations of life. If that proves to be true for some patients it might, in theory, be possible to teach them other ways of coping with stress and anxieties without rises in blood pressure.

Eye cataract surgery is old hat now

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I have a cataract in my left eye. My doctor has been watching it for four years. Now I've been told that the cataract is ready for surgery. From the day I heard this I have been bombarded with all kinds of opinions about the different kinds of surgery that other people have had. Of course, each one insists that their kind of operation is the only one to have.

Mr. M.C.A.

Dear Mr. A.:

I know exactly what your problem is. At the time of any elective (not emergency) operation a large group of friends and relatives can be counted on to offer an opinion that usually serves only to confuse the patient and to induce unnecessary anxiety.

There is someone you can turn to, and that person is the doctor who has so carefully been following your cataract as it progressed from an immature one to a ripe, or mature, cataract that is ready for surgery.

The lens of the eye is normally absolutely clear. This allows light rays to pass through it and all the images that you see are sharp and distinct.

Clouding of the lens suggests an early cataract. With it comes some diminution of vision. Many people function for years with mild clouding of the lens. It is only when the lens becomes markedly cloudy, or opaque, that vision is severely handicapped.

Some cataracts progress so slowly that it may take years before surgery is necessary. Others ripen rather quickly. It should also be mentioned that, although cataracts almost always occur in late middle age and in the elderly, they can also occur in the very young after an injury. Infants, too, are sometimes born with a congenital cataract.

The cataract operation is aimed at removing the cloudy lens. You might ask how one sees without a lens. After surgery, eyeglasses with rather powerful lenses are used to compensate for the loss of the natural lens and to aid in the return of good vision.

A valuable substitution for the cumbersome, heavy lens has been the use of contact lenses after surgery. People who are able to manipulate them (and most people can) are gratified by the immediate and comfortable return of vision.

The surgical removal of the lens has been refined to the point where the operation is safe and successful and remarkably free of complications.

In the past 15 years, there has been an explosion of wonderful new techniques for the cataract operation. The original operation is still an excellent one. It is now being done under a microscope, has which has added limitless extensions to the success of the operation and the reduction of post-operative problems.

youth

Dear Dr. Levine:

I just celebrated my 15th birthday a couple of weeks ago. My father is a severe alcoholic, which is bad enough in itself, but during the past three years my family and neighbors have realized he also suffers a mental condition, which combined with the alcohol, has developed into a very sad situation for everyone involved.

I think I've handled myself well until now, but recently I've lost all my patience with him. No matter what he says or does, I feel upset and aggravated. I guess I know that he knows he can't prevent me from fighting back any more.

My mother and I are the two people who must face his aggressiveness every day, because my brothers have moved out and the other just pays room and board, so he's not around that often.

My mom and I have tried to help my dad in most every way we know how because without the alcohol he is a very fine man. But the situation has progressed to that where he won't accept our help, or the doctor's help.

It's easy to say for my mother to divorce him, move away with me or arrange some other dividing action, but we face a financial bind where we end with our hands tied. Everything in our home is under my father's name. Therefore, I doubt we'd get anything if my mother filed for divorce.

I guess I'm asking advice as to what I personally can do. I've ignored him, fought with him, talked to him, and acted nice to please him. I've even moved away a couple times, but when I return, it seems the problems are always worse.

Could a social service help me?

Answer: Yours is truly a tragic story, which points up the disastrous results of one individual's alcoholism. Our track record with alcoholics is not the greatest anyway, but when the patient — your father — refuses to co-operate with you, your mother or the doctors, there is little we can do. You could resort to certification of your father as mentally incompetent, or a danger to himself or others. All of these are tough to prove, and because your father is such a nice guy when he is sober, he'd probably charm the hospital to let him go in fairly short order.

You've discussed, cajoled, begged, argued and fought with your father, all to no avail. You've even run away — still he persists in his destructive behavior, which is destructive to himself, as well as to you and your mother.

It's time to admit defeat. By that I mean, his alcoholism is so out of control that you can't help him, and it is doing damage to you now. You must get help. A Family Service Agency, Adolescent Clinic, or Social Work Department of any hospital can provide you and your mother with the ongoing help you need. You could also get in touch with a social worker. On hearing your story they might wish to arrange outside living accommodations for you. They might even consider pressing charges of neglect against your father, although I doubt this is a viable course of action.

My preference is that you and your mom get help from a professional, who can help you get the strength to leave if you have to, but in such a way that you will not be at a financial disadvantage. They'd probably steer you to a lawyer for this. Treat yourself as if you are a very worthwhile person — do what's good for you.

You dad? Well, after it is all said and done, it is up to him. Sometimes, a realization of just how far down a person has sunk will provide the impetus to try much harder. One last thing, you and your mom might try to enlist the aid of the people at Alcoholics Anonymous. Their people have "been there," and they often provide an exceptional service.

Work, adventure on the fish boats

Elizabeth Forbes

Its been an adventurous season filled with hard work, some risk and many new experiences for young Paul Lochhead.

He's been out where the fish run off Vancouver Island, first after herring and more recently to help gather in the salmon.

"I worked with a buyer during the herring season," he told me.

"There was no fishing connected with it. We picked up the herring from boats out there and took our loads in to a plant on the west coast.

"The herring roe was popped at that plant and sold to Japanese."

Herring season this year began at the first of March and ended the middle of April.

In that six weeks Paul spent most of his time on a barge where the catch was kept in bins until delivered to the fish plant.

On the barge he slipped and slithered through mounds of silvery fish, checking and preparing them for the bins which he had filled with a brine solution (salt and water) to keep them in good condition.

With the season over and a recommendation as a good worker he moved, in early June, to the troller LJ as deckhand for the salmon run.

"On the LJ we were really fishing," he tells you with a satisfied nod of his head. "We had four lines out, both sides of the boat, each with eight to 12 lures."

It was a two-man operation, the skipper and Paul.

Each had a side of the troller to watch and to service, and when the fish were biting, time and time again, they would have a salmon on every lure.

"Springs came first, then the cohoes and as this was a pink salmon year, we were also getting humpies (humpbacks)", Paul explained.

With the fish in the boat it was his work to cut, clean and leave them to bleed for awhile, then to wash, gut and prepare them for the hold.

Knee-deep in flake ice down there, he made sure each fish was fully iced before storing in bins.

There was a knack to placing the fish in those bins, he says. You didn't just toss them in and forget them.

As many as 90 to 100 went into each one and they had to be stacked in just the right position, otherwise the flesh could be dented and bruised and the skin distorted.

Trollers on the west coast keep together as much as possible and within radio contact, Paul discovered.

Tips were passed over those radios, through a scrambled system of communication, about hot spots where fish were running "and we'd get to those spots as quickly as we could," he says.

The LJ came in on an average of every 12 days to unload, then returned to the fishing grounds as soon as steam was up.

Paul's work shift was basically 10 days on and four days off but that, as he puts it, was flexible.

"When the fish were running we had no time to think of days off, we were trolling at the first hint of dawn, usually around four in the morning, and we didn't stop until anywhere between 9 and 11 at night."

Actually the salmon season lasts until about the end of October.

The LJ is still out there somewhere, with its four lines out, both sides of the boat.

There's no deckhand aboard, however, for with the run slackening off as it usually does toward the end, Paul decided to pack it up a few weeks ago, take a short holiday and then find something to do for the coming months.

Looking back at the hard work, the risk and the dawn-to-dark hours, he sums it all up in a few quiet words.

"It was a tremendous experience, one I will never forget."

Paul is the younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Ian Lochhead of Colwood.

He completed his Grade 12 education in 1977 at Dunsmuir High School and in the spring of 1978, like many another young person of his age, set off to see something of the world.

That included travelling here and there in western Europe and in Greece and visiting relatives in the British Isles.

He returned to Victoria early this year and almost immediately went out on the herring boat.

Since coming ashore he has been to Edmonton for a get-together with his brother, Jim, who is working on an oil rig 100 miles north of that city.

GRAY PANTHERS FIGHT NEGATIVE ATTITUDES

Room for seniors in job force

WINNIPEG (CP) — The day-to-day problems of senior citizens are magnified, compared with those of younger men and women, because of society's negative attitude toward people over 65, the founder and chairwoman of the Gray Panthers says.

For example, the working world — finding and keeping jobs — is a concern for senior citizens and the young alike, says Margaret Kuhn. But seniors face special difficulties such as compulsory retirement.

The Gray Panthers want to introduce new job concepts and practices to make room for senior citizens in the work force, Ms. Kuhn says.

The activist group's recommendations include keeping seniors employed through apprenticeship programs and work sharing, where a team of two seniors does one job.

"We (also) want to keep people from opting for early retirement by making work more pleasant," Ms. Kuhn told delegates to the Senior Boom conference in Winnipeg.

The three-day conference was organized for senior citizens, government officials and professionals to discuss the concerns of the over-65 group.

It included workshops on human rights, retirement, education, the needs of elderly women and basic requirements for life with dignity.

Nine per cent of Canada's population is over 65. In Manitoba, the figure is 11 per cent — or 110,000 people — and is expected to reach 12 per cent by the year 2000.

Ms. Kuhn says the steadily-growing senior citizen population could have the power to change society and the world.

"We have nothing to lose," she says. "We can ensure the future of others and initiate changes in society."

The western world has been "damaged by ageism — a social ill like racism and sexism — and (it) must be stamped out," Mrs. Kuhn says.

"It's a new age, an age of liberation."

At 74, Ms. Kuhn, a small, bright and energetic woman, likes to brag about her age.

It is now nine years since she and four friends — all forced to retire at 65 — formed the Gray Panthers. The United States-based coalition now boasts more than 10,000 members of all ages committed to an activist approach to social change for the elderly.

"There is the myth that senility is a part of old age, that elders are mindless and sexless; that old age is a disease no one wants to admit to having — but one common to us all," Ms. Kuhn says.

"I see my gray hair and wrinkles as badges of distinction."

Patients impatient

"Not all doctors are abrupt and unfeeling," writes D.B.K., Guelph, telling me about the personal interest, kind treatment and good advice consistently offered by his physician. He was commenting on my recent column in which I led off with the question "Have you got a good doctor?".

Although I wrote critically of some doctors — the production-line, in-and-out, revolving-door treatment — I too cited cases where medical and surgical services were provided with consideration and compassion.

An Ottawa doctor says he is in partial agreement with my contention that, for older people particularly, he and his colleagues should make time to advise patients of results of tests and X-rays rather than just saying "If you don't hear anything, don't worry about it".

He would like to practice holistic medicine (dealing with body, mind and emotions) but he says Ontario's medical plan (OHIP) makes no fee allowance for taking more time with seniors. He believes some other provincial health plans do.

He says that, with family physicians averaging under $30,000, they have got to keep at it to make a living and really cannot afford to act as psychiatrist or father adviser, unless extra fees are provided.

Another doctor tells me he is much too busy (surgery all morning, office full of patients all afternoon) to call patients about tests unless there is reason for further action. He reviews lab reports between patients and after hours and, if tests or X-rays show no new trouble, he marks the report for the patient's file. However patients are encouraged to phone for a report a certain number of days after the test.

That arrangement is not too bad. But some older folk don't like to phone ("trouble the doctor", they say), can't get through on a busy line or end up with only an answering service and give up. Should exceptions not be made for seniors — or at least certain seniors who obviously are the worrying kind?

Another reader says his doctor seems to think that the less he explains to the patient the better and that his attitude is 'I know best, just do what I say'. "I stay with him because he is a good doctor but I do wish he would communicate with me a little better," this reader tells me.

There are doctors who appear to be all-wise and all-knowing; their skills and knowledge may be great but they could do a lot more for their patients if they treated the whole person.

A Toronto doctor says "Some time taken in talking to a patient, finding out about his or her lifestyles, emotional and nutritional status as well as physical status can do a lot to handle a patient's problems.

"A quick prescription and out is not the answer. In my own practice, I have not prescribed tranquillizing drugs for the last three years but have managed to offer a little extra time rather than psychotropic drugs."

I hope you have a GP who thinks and acts in similar enlightened fashion.

You can get some help figuring financial needs

By MANNY LEVINE

It isn't easy to calculate the amount of life insurance protection that your family needs. Nor is it easy to determine the amount of retirement income that you're going to require in your golden years. Since nobody can predict with certainty the future rate of inflation, it is very difficult to figure just how much money is going to be enough.

However, your chances for successful financial planning are enhanced when you seek the counsel of trained professional people. Agents and advisers can help you set up a programme which is well-suited to the needs of your family.

Sharpen Your Pencil is a free nine-page booklet that is offered by the Canadian Life Insurance Association. The booklet will assist you in completing some of the preliminary work that is involved in family financial planning. Once you've worked out the basics, you will then be prepared for a consultation with your agent or adviser.

To obtain a copy of Sharpen Your Pencil, write to the Canadian Life Insurance Association, Educational Division, 55 University Ave., Toronto, Ont. M5J 2K7. Single copies only, please.

Kidnapped bee returns to library

PEMBROKE, Mass. (AP) — A golden bumble bee which had been kidnapped was found and brought home on the roof of a police cruiser.

The bee is a metal ornament which has adorned the cupola of a library since 1975. It is a metre long and a metre wide and weighs 46 pounds, and police say it had been stolen, apparently as a prank.

That brownish soil on the bathroom tile grouting may be mildew not dirt. Scour it off and it'll return. But spray on a household disinfectant, let it stand overnight and you can sponge off the mildew, reports a home economist at the Porcelain Enamel Institute. Give the tile a good spraying once a month and the mildew won't return.

Col. By's trunk given to museum

FRANT, England (CP) — A trunk that reputedly once held the dress uniforms of Col. John By, founder of Ottawa and builder of the Rideau canal system, has been donated to the Ottawa Historical Society and will be presented to the Bytown Museum there.

Col. By, born in London in 1779, died in this upland Sussex village in 1836. His trunk is being donated by Rev. P. N. Hamilton, rector of Bridge Park.

Barbara Stanwyck clones? Not today

WINNIPEG (CP) — There's a big difference between the makeup of the 1940s and '50s and the bright looks for this fall, says Kay Larke, a beauty consultant with Elizabeth Arden of Canada.

Although people in the industry are talking about a throwback to those bygone years, Ms. Larke insists that today's women will not look like Barbara Stanwyck clones.

Back in the '40s women wore pancake makeup and the reds were dead, she explains. But luminous face colors sheer in composition are the Elizabeth Arden story this fall.

It's meant to present a face that will parallel the return to fit and shape in fashion.

For day, says Ms. Larke, it's a simpler, more structured look.

For evening, it's an all-out glamor scene.

The new season's cosmetic color palette includes a wide range of new shades and accents. They include a combination of clear tones on lips and nails and muted colors on eyes and cheeks.

There are monochromatic old rose or pink beige looks with a glint of gold, bronze or copper.

Ms. Larke says the look focuses clearly on striking defined eyes or bright mouths. The eyes will be softly outlined and shaded in a blend of two or three colors for highlighting, contouring and shadowing. The mouth should be outlined and colored with a vivid shade.

When making faces, she suggests, daytime looks should be bright, clear and fairly simple.

"But for evening the new elegance in fashion calls for more finish, more ornamation for the face."

Fall fashion is glimmering

NEW YORK — Stop worrying about the energy crunch this fall. When it comes to lighting up the evening, fashion's glitter will be so intense that artificial lights can be set at their dimmest. The shimmer from the clothes should be enough to catch and magnify even the slightest voltage.

Bugle beading, metallics, pailletes, rhinestones, sequins and shimmering satins all contribute to the evening glow.

"The glitter is rebellion against the harsh realities of life today," said designer Victor Costa. One of his most popular gowns is of sheer chiffon glowing with silver pailletes. It has an attached strapless slip, a see-through high neckline and long sleeves. If that look is too ethereal, then there are a series of strapless black velvet gowns with oversized floral designs — in sequins.

Sprays of bugle beads are the choice of designers John Anthony and Judy Hornby.

"You really become the center of attention when you wear something with bugle beads," Hornby said. "Because of it's 3-D effect, bugle beading often gives the illusion of additional panels to clothing."

Anthony, who has a more delicate hand with bugle beads, uses them sparingly in either a raindrop or waterfall pattern on indigo blue or black-on-black for subdued glitter.

"My designs are expensive," he admitted, "and when my customers spend $4,800 for a bugle-beaded top and satin pants or $7,000 to $9,000 for a bugle-beaded gown, they want to be able to wear it more than once."

Since the circles they move in tend to include the same people, a bright dress with excessive beading would be recognized quickly.

Designer Bill Blass believes his customers prefer the ultimate in evening glamor, no matter what the cost or attention-getting design. The outfit that drew the most applause at a recent fashion show was a red chiffon gown and stole with gold sequins and Russian sable cuffs.

Latest in China is sweater girl

PEKING (AP) — A raven-haired girl in a blue cashmere sweater rubs its rich collar against her cheek, smiles with lips that are painted pink, and murmurs the virtues of Snow Lotus sweaters to the passing populace.

The Chinese sweater girl, wearing nail polish and wavy, Western-style hair, graces one of seven new advertising billboards at a busy intersection at Changan Ave. near the Peking Hotel.

"Smooth, silky feeling, velvety softness, elaborate workmanship, smart-looking, warm, comfortable and durable," said the billboard in Chinese and English.

The billboard was put up by the China National Import-Export Textile Corp., Peking branch. It gives a telephone number and a cable address for the benefit of foreign buyers.

Other billboards by various ministries say: "Orders welcome." The huge, brightly colored signs were painted for the National Day holidays and tout jasmine shampoo, violet hair cream and tonic, Great Wall luggage, tableware, arts and crafts and pianos and violins.

Next to these unabashed calls for capitalism and foreign exchange appear the standard red and white billboard slogans: "Long Live the People's Republic of China."

Passers-by, however, are more taken by the winsome face on the billboard and the sought-after signs of a better life.

China has announced a spate of new consumer goods will be on the market for the holidays and Peking residents, most dressed in blues and grays, stared at a blossoming of advertising that would gladden the heart of a Madison Avenue denizen.

"That's a nice sweater," said a young women in worn pea-green trousers and jacket, "But it's too difficult to get, too many people line up to buy them and there's nothing left."

A man from Heilungjaing said he bought a cashmere sweater for his wife for 20 or 30 yuan ($12-$23 Canadian). He said Chinese don't wear sweaters as an outer garment, like the girl in the poster. They usually cover their sweaters with plain jackets.

Liu Xueun, a young woman who works in the textile business , said she prefers her own sweater — a pink polyester with a slight, high collar and black bead flowers embroidered at the throat.

Her friend, Liu Xianquan, a machinest, approved of the sweater in the poster and said: "Chinese love to be beautiful, too. Women should wear more pretty clothes."

He even said that traditional Chinese clothing was "rather beautiful" and that he liked the traditional Qipao — the high-collared close-fitting dress. For years it has been taboo and regarded as decadent, seductive and definitly not proletarian.

Zhou Naijun, a 22-year-old pharmaceutical worker, joined the fashion forum under the billboard gaze of the sweater girl. He complained that too much attention is given to women's clothes.

"Men also have a craving to wear Western-style suits and bright colors but no one dares to be first," he said. "I would be if I had the money."

Western-style men's suits sell for between 80 and 100 yuan ($69-$86 Canadian), he said. That is a month's salary or more for many workers.

Computer dates for zoo animals

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Computer dating is going to the Siberian tigers — and other animals.

Not that the tigers couldn't attract other tigers on their own. An electronic matchmaker is needed, Don Farst, president-elect of the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums, said, so zoo scientists can keep records on the animals' genetic makeups.

"From this we can determine how much two animals are related and whether they would make good mates," Farst said.

The idea is to avoid inbreeding between animals of the same or closely related parents. Extensive inbreeding could lead to changes in a species' appearance, Farst said, or to extinction.

For example, Farst said, more than 90 percent of the 204 Siberian tigers in the United States are descendants of nine tigers.

In general, Farst said, most zoo animals have been quite fertile. Some zoos are using are using animal birth control, and other animals are being exported.

British streamline limb-fit techniques

LONDON (CP) — Dramatic reductions in the time taken to fit patients with artificial limbs are promised following research by the British department of health and social security.

A team led by Reg Lawrence, deputy director of the department's biomedical research unit in London, has developed a technique for making polypropylene limb sockets that should bring the time to provide a limb down to about a day instead of, in some cases, months.

Present methods of making a socket for an artificial limb take time because it has to be shaped from an alloy or from glass-reinforced plastic by a skilled craftsman, working from a plaster cast of the stump.

With the new technique, the cast is put into a machine together with a standard polypropylene moulding known as a preform, which is then automatically drawn into the shape of the cast by a vacuum-forming process. In this way it takes only 15 to 20 minutes to make a socket.

Moreover, the use of a machine opens up the possibility of making limbs at amputation centres and fitting them from stocks instead of having to send the casts to a central manufacturing unit.

So far, work has been confined to sockets for below-the-knee artificial legs. Trials began 2½ years ago and 25 patients have been fitted successfully with artificial limbs.

A machine to form above-the-knee sockets should be completed by early next year and the team hopes eventually to apply its work to artificial arms.

Golden 'tulip craze'

NEW YORK (AP) — The whispers around gold markets about the tulip craze are growing louder.

Tulipomania hit the Netherlands in the 17th century. Virtually the entire population of the country invested in tulip bulbs, driving the price from an insignificant amount to dizzying heights. Over a period of two years, a large chunk of the Dutch economy was tied up in tulip bulbs.

Then the bubble burst. The price began falling, far quicker than it had risen but by almost the same amount. Thousands were wiped out, victims of speculation with almost no basis in fundamentals of the market.

To some gold analysts, the parallel between tulipomania and the recent gold rush are striking — although, as Jeffrey Nichols at Argus Research Corp. says: "In fairness, the present gold rush is not yet comparable either in magnitude or madness to the Dutch disease."

The similarities were magnified this past week as the price of gold hit a peak of $444 an ounce in Europe — more than double its price a year ago — and then began plummeting. It lost more than $80 in three days before staging a modest recovery.

Opening lead — jack of diamonds.

When declarer has a choice of different ways to play a hand, he should choose the method most likely to succeed. Practically every competent declarer follows this principle. Very often, declarer's decision depends on how he thinks the defenders' cards are divided. If he has no reliable clues to guide him on this point, he depends mostly on probabilities.

Here is case where declarer failed to follow the indicated probability and was defeated as a result. He took the diamond lead with the ace, played a low trump to dummy's eight and finessed the queen of hearts. West took the queen with the king and South later lost two diamond tricks and a club to go down one.

South based his method of play mainly on the 50 per cent chance that East had the king of hearts. However, at the same time he missed a different method of play that offered a far better chance.

After taking the ace of diamonds, South should have led the A-Q of hearts! In the actual deal, West wins with the king and East-West presumably cash two diamond tricks before shifting to a club.

South wins with the ace, leads a spade to the eight, ruffs a heart high, leads a spade to nine, ruffs another heart high, establishing dummy's fifth heart as a trick, and later discards his jack of clubs on the eight of hearts.

This method of play gives declarer an excellent chance for the contract whenever the hearts are divided 3-3 36 per cent) or 4-2 (48 per cent). The 84 per cent chance of a favorable heart division is much more attractive than the 50 per cent chance that East has the king of hearts. Declarer plays as though his heart holding is the A-x instead of the A-Q.

More puffing by the world's poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smoking took a sudden jump in the world last year with increases recorded largely in the poorer areas of the world, says the United States agriculture department.

World tobacco consumption reached a record 4.96 million tons in 1978. The increase, more than 3.5 per cent, was the largest since 1973.

Most of that tobacco went into cigarettes — 4.2 trillion of them, 100 billion more than the previous year. Smokers paid between $85 billion and $100 billion for their cigarettes.

But while smoking is on the increase, it's occurring in different places. North Americans and those living in some of the advanced industrial nations smoke less than they used to because of high taxes and warnings that cigarettes contribute to death and illness.

At the same time, the world's emerging countries are smoking more, often American cigarettes exported under the U.S. government's Food for Peace program. Other industrial countries also are sending the poorer countries the cigarettes they discourage their own citizens from smoking.

The Worldwatch Institute, a non-profit research organization supported by the Environmental Program of the United Nations, described smoking in parts of the Third World this way:

"Throughout most of Africa, vendors must break open packs and sell cigarettes one by one.

"In isolated Sudanese towns, for example, one sees young men with annual incomes equivalent to only a few hundred dollars buying Benson and Hedges cigarettes at 10 cents apiece."

Between 1969 and 1973, says the agriculture department, Sudan made about 639 million cigarettes a year and imported 666 million. In 1977, it made 700 million and imported 900 million.

The story is similar in Asia and Latin America. Bangladesh, one of the world's poorest countries, produced 10.1 billion cigarettes in 1974 and 11.65 billion in 1977.

In countries where wealth is growing more rapidly, the use of cigarettes is making huge jumps. Venezuela manufactured 16.22 billion in 1974 and 20.3 billion in 1977.

In Japan, an estimated 35 million smokers went through a pack a day each in 1977. The Office of Smoking and Health — part of the U.S. Public Health Service — says the Japanese are increasing their daily consumption, despite an anti-smoking drive that includes education programs, health warnings on packages and limits on advertising.

The Office of Smoking and Health said Canada, Britain and Sweden, in addition to the United States, have recorded declines. Production of cigarettes has gone down in West Germany and France, although French imports of American brands boosted actual sales there in 1978.

The United States exported nearly 67 billion cigarettes in 1977, twice a many as it was selling in the early years of the decade.

The Soviet Union says it is planning a big increase in the production of cigarettes. But the Soviet Embassy in Washington said they will be for export — not for home consumption.

Black market 'saves lives'

KOK SUNG (AP) — "Without the black market, we would be dead," says one of a stream of Cambodians who daily cross into eastern Thailand to shop at this vast, open-air market which offers everything from rice to jeans.

It is this spirit of free enterprise, mixed with Thailand's willingness to bend the rules, that has done more so far in saving tens of thousands of Cambodians from hunger than the host of international agencies trying to mount a relief operation.

As war-weary, hungry Cambodians pressed against the Thai border, fleeing the fighting between the government of toppled Premier Pol Pot and the invading Vietnamese, government and aid agency officials debated the politics and mechanics of a relief program.

But Thailand's freewheeling merchants saw the gleam of profit in the gold and jewels some of the Cambodians carried.

Two black markets sprang up in the rice fields north of the key frontier town of Aranyaprathet. The Cambodians now exchange valuables for Thai currency, purchase critically-needed supplies at inflated prices and return daily to Cambodia where many live in crude forest shelters.

It is estimated the markets may be supplying up to 100,000 Cambodians and preventing them from pouring into Thailand out of desperation.

Thai officials, although not totally happy with the situation, take live-and-let-live attitude. The merchants, racing to the border area loaded down with crates of food and other wares, could not be happier, although some complain their Cambodian customers are becoming better bargainers.

Film, TV workers get pact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Behind-the-scenes film and television workers ratified a new contract Monday that union officials estimate will cost Hollywood producers $374 million over three years.

Meanwhile, a second union prepared to vote on a tentative agreement that could end the picketing of major Hollywood studios and film processors.

Mac St. Johns, spokesman for the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees, said his union approved the pact 6,362 to 5,528. The terms are retroactive to Aug. 1.

The union represents 24,000 Los Angeles area behind-the-camera film technicians. St. John said union leadership was "very pleased the contract was ratified."

The alliance threatened a strike last month that could have shut down the motion picture and television industry for the first time in 33 years. But agreement was reached just moments before a strike deadline and the union later voted by mail.

A union representative said five of the union's 24 locals, including three of the film industry's largest groups of workers, voted against acceptance of the pact.

Six affiliated basic crafts locals were also voting Monday, and one — representing sound, construction and lighting workers at Disneyland — voted no, St. Johns said.

The approved contract provides pay increases totalling $2.75 per hour over the three years.

Meanwhile, striking office workers were voting on a contract offer that would officially end a 12-day walkout by members of Local 174 of the Office and Professional Employees International Union.

Quinlan as nun touted for academy

Scott's World

By Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Roman Catholic nuns make fascinating movie heroines and few are more compelling than Kathleen Quinlan as a young nun in love in Stanley Kramer's exceptional new movie The Runner Stumbles.

The devotion, purity of character and unattainability of nuns make for enormous dramatic possibilities and as often as not win plaudits for the actresses who play them.

Kathleen, 24, follows in the footsteps of several stars who won Academy Award nominations and New York Film Critics awards for their performances.

Perhaps the most popular nun in movie history was Julie Andrews' performance as the young acolyte in The Sound of Music, for which she also was nominated for an Academy Award.

Producer-director Kramer is convinced Kathleen has produced an award-winning performance as Sister Rita in his story of a nun who falls in love with a priest (Dick Van Dyke) and is subsequently murdered.

The movie is based on a play which in turn was taken from a real life love affair between a nun and a priest in Michigan in the 1920s.

Kathleen, best remembered for her stunning performance as a schizophrenic girl in I Never Promised You A Rose Garden, researched her role carefully. She had a head start. She was born and reared a Catholic.

Last year she spent three days on retreat in Milwaukee, Wis., at a jubilee for the sisters of St. Francis. Some 300 nuns attended the celebration for sisters who had spent 25, 50 and 60 years in the order.

" The priest in charge . . . liked the script and allowed me to talk to he nuns," Kathleen said.

"The older sisters thought the script was a little racy. The younger ones said the situation happens all the time. They find ways to deal with it by talking to their mother superior or a priest.

"They either conquer their love for a man by renewing their faith or renounce their vows. But it is something both nuns and priests have to deal with."

Kathleen, who has apartments in New York and Beverly Hills, is no longer a Catholic. She is single, unattached and a devout young actress — humorous, dedicated and unimpressed with her beauty.

She admits that like most little Catholic girls — educated by sisters — she fantasized about become a nun when she was a child.

"It is one of the most touching love stories I've ever read. It's handled very delicately, this love between a 23-year-old nun and a priest who is in his 50s. Stanley (Kramer) and I had some battle about how Sister Rita should be played, but we are both pleased at the way it turned out."

Kathleen won her role simply and easily. Kramer, who lives in Seattle, had her in mind for the nun from the beginning.

He sent Kathleen the script then invited her to his home and asked if she wanted to play the role.

"I didn't hesitate for a second," Kathleen said. "I liked the context of the story and the things Sister Rita symbolized — her incredible respect for all life and her spiritual commitment to religion, not just Catholicism but all the world's religions.

"I played a hooker in Little Ladies of the Night, a TV movie about three years ago. However, I don't think I did justice to the hooker because it was so hard to imagine myself in those circumstances.

"Playing a nun was just as difficult in a different way. But I feel I have done justice to Sister Rita. I certainly hope I have."

CITY WATCHDOG RICHARDS Report #130. Congratulations to whoever decided to paint the Johnson Street Bridge blue instead of black. It sure makes the City's Waterfront area more scenic. Your City's Watcdog wishes to thank the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce for supplying refreshments to all passengers on the 93rd Anniversary Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway Trip to Nanaimo, sponsored by the Native Sons of British Columbia. If you wish further information regarding City Matters please phone your City's Watchdog. C. Joe Richards, 383-6259 or write Post Office Box 154. Seen in Passing: Your City's Watchdog discovering that the Downtown Streets of Victoria appear to be unprotected after 11:15 pm. on a Sunday evening. Your City's Watchdog had the occasion to escort a young lady to the James Bay area who had missed her last bus after coming out of a late evening show and did not see a police car in the Downtown area for over two hours. Postcript: The only police officer that was seen was one buying a package of Cheezies and walked back to police station at 1:00 am. October 1st, 1979 possibly on his coffee break.

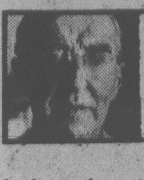
Stones: a cursed blessing

GARDENING

Jack Beastall



Stones in the soil are looked upon as a curse by those who have experienced only deep garden loams. Their removal becomes an obsession accounting for hours of labor that could be better spent.

No matter how much raking and collecting is done it is not long before their presence is again evident on the surface and more raking and collecting is needed.

At one time it was a common belief among gardeners and farmers that stones "grew" in the soil and eventually became masses of rock. This, they reasoned, accounted for the constant appearance of stones on the surface.

What really happens is that every time we turn the soil or cultivate the surface the finer grains sink and the chunky material is left on top. It is something akin to sifting; we actually separate the large from the small.

As long as there are stones in the soil we are cultivating, and rain to separate and compact the smaller grains, the stones will eventually appear on the surface.

Many gardeners, when describing their soil, use the term "rocks" which gives the impression of a gigantic and heavy mass. To me there is a great difference between a rock and a stone.

Examining a garden soil said to be "full of rocks" I have found nothing larger than gravel, and often only pea gravel. To classify these particles as rocks is akin to calling sow-bugs garden elephants.

Stones, as I prefer to call them, can be beneficial in any soil. The only ones requiring removal are those of two- or three-inch dimension which interfere with the operation of garden tools.

Stones are small pieces of disintegrated rock, each piece containing some of the minerals present in the parent mass.

Rain, snow, frost and summer heat combine to cause further breakdown and the released minerals are added to the soil for plants to use. Soils containing a percentage of stones are often richer in minerals than those which are stoneless.

Although the roots of plants are below soil level, a constant exchange of air is necessary for their well being.

That is one reason we till a soil and cultivate the surface to keep it loose. Stones naturally give a more open texture to the soil and thereby permit deeper air penetration.

Reasonable amounts of stones in a soil help to facilitate drainage and are especially useful in low-lying land where run-off is likely to accumulate. Their removal could result in flooding.

From this we can see that a stoney soil is a warmer soil since water is the coldest component of any soil and the most difficult to heat.

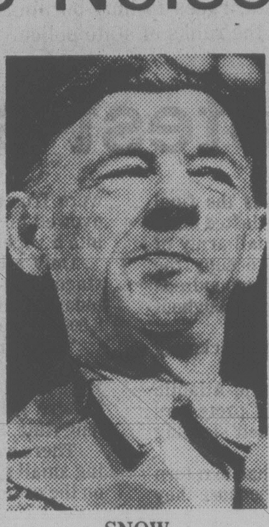
A warm soil is one that can be worked earlier in the spring and later in the fall, and the plants within it can better withstand winter conditions.

In summer, rock accumulates greater heat than fine soil and holds it much longer, so that a stoney soil does not lose its summer warmth as fast as ordinary loam without stones. Such a soil is invaluable for fall and winter food crops.

Whether stones in the soil are a curse or benefit depends to some degree on what the gardener has been used to working. To those brought up on a stoney soil there is nothing better because they have learned its value and how it should be handled. To the deep-loam gardener a stone is unbearable, an annoyance that severely impedes his progress.

To remove most of the stones from a garden soil is not only an ambitious project almost impossible to carry out, its achievement would result in a definite drop in soil level and could have detrimental effects on drainage. So remove the larger ones and leave the rest to continue their good work.

Willie Nelson tops at Ole Opry



SNOW
. . . hall of fame

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Rebel Willie Nelson, who once boycotted the Country Music Awards show because it had forsaken the country sound, was "shocked" Monday night when he heard his name called for Entertainer of The Year.

Nelson, wearing a country shirt and blue jeans with his long brown hair in a pigtail, sat in the Grand Ole Opry audience for most of the 90-minute broadcast and watched Kenny Rogers and Charlie Daniels take three awards each. Rogers' single, The Gambler, also won songwriter Don Schlitz a trophy for Song of The Year.

The best entertainer was the final award of the night and most thought it belonged to Rogers, but when Dolly Parton called Nelson's name the audience responded with the only standing ovation of the night.

"I thought Kenny was about to clean sweep so I was surprised. I was shocked," said Nelson in a timid voice.

Nelson failed to take any other awards although he was nominated in two more categories — vocal duo with fellow outlaw Waylon Jennings and best album with rock 'n' roll piano player Leon Russell.

Rogers and Charlie Daniels, two of the huskiest men in country music, would have turned the show into a two-man affair had it not been for the 46-year-old Nelson's surprise win.

The CMA's 5,000 members voted Rogers Male Vocalist of The Year and selected his album, The Gambler, the best of 1979. He combined with Dottie West to take Duo of The Year. Rogers was nominated in five categories and another of his singles, She Believes In Me, written by Steve Gigg, was also up for best song.

Daniels took top single for The Devil Went Down To Georgia, a tune that challenges the devil to a fiddling duel. The rotund southern rock 'n' roller also took the bullet-shaped CMA trophy for best instrumentalist and his band was voted best instrumental group.

"Thank you for accepting me," said Daniels, his eyes hidden by a cowboy hat.

Slinky Barbara Mandrell, wearing a silver backless gown, broke into tears as she accepted her trophy for Female Vocalist of The Year.

"I really wanted that award very badly. When they did call my name something sort of snapped and I couldn't hold it back," she said. "It was like a dam breaking loose. I just couldn't hold it back."

Miss Mandrell and Loretta Lynn's sister, Crystal Gayle, were the only women nominated for best entertainer.

Four funny guys named the Statler Brothers, the first group ever nominated for top entertainer, took the vocal group award for the seventh time, bumping out last year's winner, The Oak Ridge Boys.

Hank Snow was inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame along with Hubert Long, who died in 1972.

Gas guzzlers put to torch

SEATTLE (AP) — As gasoline goes up in price, some big cars are going up in flames, insurance companies have found.

"We do have people taking torches to old gas hogs — in Seattle and elsewhere," said Ken Armstrong of the Farmers Insurance Group.

An insurance official also said the percentage of compact cars stolen nearly tripled in the past year.

Bob French (arms oustretched) finds himself looking at a knife as he tries unsuccessfully Sunday to stop New Hampshire Fish and Game officer from puncturing inner tubes used to support pontoon bridge erected by anti-nuclear protesters outside Seabrook power station construction site. Seabrook N-site protest spills to courthouse

Times News Services

HAMPTON, N.H. — Police confronting about 300 demonstrators from the nearby Seabrook power plant site sealed off the courthouse today following the arraignment of two persons arrested during a weekend anti-nuclear protest.

A total of 21 demonstrators were arrested for criminal trespass charges during the weekend.

Earlier today construction workers returned to their jobs at the plant site, walking past a half-dozen anti-nuclear demonstrators huddled outside the main gate.

The protesters made no attempt to block the workers, who entered the area under police escort about 7 a.m. local time.

The courthouse demonstration was the final gasp of an anti-nuclear showdown that lasted three days at the $2.6 billion facility. A small army of about 2,000 demonstrators tried to occupy the site, but were repelled at a tall fence by hundreds of police and national guardsmen from throughout New England.

By Monday about 400 were left, picketing quietly at the main gate.

But as chilly winds swept in off the Atlantic Monday evening, a steady stream of protesters cleaned up their campsites, packed their sleeping bags and headed home.

Many protesters left because they had to return to work, school or home. Others left because they were frustrated they hadn't accomplished their avowed mission — turning the Seabrook complex into a vegetable-producing commune.

Only a handful vowed to come back today to stage a sit-in in front of the Seabrook entrance today in hopes of keeping the construction site's 8,800 employees from going to back work.

"We're not going to be here for a day. We're not going to be here for a week," said Janice Fine, an 18-year-old college student from Albany, N.Y. "We're going to be in Seabrook for an awfully long time. So get comfortable everybody."

There were sporadic incidents Monday, involving small numbers of demonstrators, but nothing on the order of the mass fence stormings over the weekend. Only one person was arrested Monday.

At one point, a handful of demonstrators tried to chain themselves to the fence, but troopers shooed them away with chemical Mace.

Many demonstrators expressed surprise and anger when they were not arrested but instead forced back with riot gases and fire hoses.

"They have no right to hurt us for breaking the law," screamed Carla Riggs of York, Me., as medics poured water over her Mace-covered face. "The constitution says we're to be arrested and tried for our crimes, not gassed and beaten."

State Attorney General Thomas Rath said the remaining demonstrators would be allowed to stay "as long as order can be maintained."

Plot in wind to free Manson crowd?

LONG BEACH, Calif. (Reuter) — Followers of Charles Manson and the Symbionese Liberation Army have joined forces to try to free Manson and other imprisoned members of the group, a newspaper reported Sunday.

In a copyright story, the Long Beach Independent Press-Telegram quoted police officials as saying the two criminal groups had formed an alliance and were plotting a spectacular operation.

"Our street sources tell us that the Manson-SLA group is planning something that will make the Patty Hearst thing look penny ante," one intelligence agent was quoted as saying.

Members of the so-called Manson family have been convicted of nine murders, including that of actress Sharon Tate, wife of movie director Roman Polanski.

The SLA's most publicized crime was the kidnapping of newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst in 1974.

The paper, using FBI agents and police as its sources, claimed that the alliance had raised almost $2 million in a crime spree.

The authorities also claim that the Manson-SLA group has stockpiled weapons and gold and has purchased thousands of dollars worth of food and equipment, the paper said.

Manson and four other members of his group have been imprisoned since their arrests in late 1969. Two other Manson family members, including Lynette (Squeaky) Fromme, who was convicted of trying to assassinate former president Gerald Ford in 1976, are also behind bars.

The SLA still has at least four members in California prisons.

Plainclothes killing greets superspy

BELFAST (Reuter) — A plainclothes British soldier was shot to death here Monday by guerrillas within hours of former British spymaster Sir Maurice Oldfield's arrival in Northern Ireland to take over as the supreme security officer.

Another soldier, also out of uniform, was wounded in what appears to have been a carefully planned Irish Republican Army ambush. He managed to evade the gunmen and run back to his base a few hundred metres away.

Police said gunmen had taken over a hardware shop overlooking St. James' Road in the predominantly Roman Catholic Falls district of Belfast and set up a sniping position.

Almost 10 hours later the two British soldiers in plainclothes drove from McCrory Park army base and down the White Rock Road. As they passed the hardware shop the gunmen opened fire with automatic rifles, riddling the yellow car in which the soldiers were travelling.

Police said the car ran out of control after being hit several times and finally crashed into a garden wall.

A British Army spokesman denied a suggestion that the British soldiers were on undercover duty and said the men were on "administrative duty."

The army spokesman, obviously embarrassed by the attack, said both soldiers were armed and were not members of the regiment based in the area.

Soldiers in civilian dress have been active in West Balfast for some years and several have been shot and killed by IRA guerrillas. In the past, the British army has always claimed the soldiers were on "administrative duties."

A British Army spokesman refused to say what regiment the men belonged to, what they were armed with and why they were in plainclothes, travelling in a civilian car.

Naval engineering student defects

TAMPA (AP) — A young Soviet naval engineering student jumped ship at the Tampa phosphate docks to seek asylum in the United States, the FBI says.

Igor Aleksandrovich Ponomakenko, 19, a student at the Soviet Naval Engineering Institute, showed up Sunday in Brooksville, Fla., 72 kilometres north of Tampa, seeking asylum, said Phil McNiff, head of the Tampa FBI office.

Ponomakeno apparently was a seaman aboard a Soviet phosphate freighter when he jumped ship at Tampa's port, McNiff said.

"He apparently left the ship through an intermediary he had on shore," McNiff said. "That intermediary has been in contact with our office and Ponomakeno has asked for asylum in the United States."

The FBI notified the state department about the asylum request, and state department personnel contacted the Soviet embassy in Washington, McNiff said.

A state department spokesman said the delay in confirming the defection was routine in order to keep delicate discussions confidential.

Boss made workers rich

SHIMONOSEKI, Japan (AP) — For two decades, the employees of Chofu Seisakusho Ltd. grudgingly followed the boss's order: buy company stock. The dividends came just recently — 30 of them became instant millionaires.

The obscure firm that makes boilers and home heaters was listed on the Hiroshima stock exchange for the first time on Sept. 20. It met with frantic buying offers, and closed the week at $17 a share — a 77-fold increase over its face value of 22 cents.

Company officials said the 30 employees had accumulated at least 60,000 shares each over the years.

"It's the best news in a long time around here," said Isao Akino, a taxi driver in this southern Japanese city whose fishing and shipbuilding industries have been hard hit by recession.

Later, Chofu Seisakusho slipped to $15 a share but remained one of Japan's hottest stocks. "No wonder," said Masashi Saito, branch manager of a brokerage her. "The book shows it's the best-run company in Japan."

Not one to disagree was Yoneo Kawakami, Chofu's 74-year-old engineer-president, who took over a small farm-implement factory in 1959 and built the company that eventually cornered 40 per cent of Japan's market in kerosene-fired boilers.

Sitting in his modestly furnished office that doubles as a reception room, Kawakami described a success formula that he said anyone in business could follow — eliminating as many obstacles as possible between himself and the customer.

Bucking strong Japanese business tradition, Kawakami said, he bypassed wholesalers and delivered directly to 13,000 retalers. He also limited the board of directors to four, including himself. "I find it easier to communicate with my men without those big salary earners," he said.

He added that although he had an outmoded plant with non-automated production lines, he was able to limit the size of his labor force and turn in an after-tax profit of more than $20,000 per worker — a figure he said was far better than that shown by such industrial giants as Sony, the television firm, and Toyota, the car maker.

"With the profits, I cut prices, increased commissions for the retailers and improved working conditions for my employees," he said.

And through it all, he was insisting that his employees invest in company stock. "I run the business for my employees," he said. "Yes, stockholders come first under the commercial law. That is exactly why I made stockholders out of my employees."

The result was that when the stock went public, about 400 of Kawakami's 830 employees were shareholders owning about 50 per cent of the company.

Kawakami said he limits his own salary to not more than five times that of the average worker and his own holdings are about 4.8 per cent of the company.

Sweden settles on new PM

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — Centre party leader Thorbjoern Faelldin is to be Sweden's new prime minister, leaders of the country's three non-Socialist parties announced today.

Faelldin, prime minister of the centre-right coalition government formed in 1976, will head a similar coalition of the Centre, Conservative and Liberal parties, which won a one-seat Riksdag (parliament) majority over the Social Democrats and Communists in last month's election.

Prime Minister and Liberal party leader Ola Ullsten and Conservative leader Goesta Bohman joined Faelldin in making the announcement after nearly three weeks of negotiations.

Syrians down Israeli spy, threaten war of attrition

DAMASCUS (AP) — Syrian jets shot down an unmanned Israeli spy plane Sunday as Defence Minister Lt.-Gen. Mustafa Tlass declared Syria is ready for a war of attrition with the Jewish state.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli Gen. David Ivri, acknowledging the loss over Syria of the U.S.-built Firebee drone, told Israel Radio the camera-equipped reconnaissance plane was sent to investigate "a massive buildup of Soviet military equipment near the city of Homs," in western Syria about 200 kilometres north of the Israeli frontier.

An Israeli military command spokesman said it is not common for Israel to send unmanned planes over Syria but "it has been going on." Ivri said Israel has been using the subsonic Firebees since before the 1973 war and he said it is not the first time one of them has disappeared.

The Syrian defence chief said Syria is "ready to carry on a war of attrition with Israel similar to the one that we fought in the Golan Heights in the spring of 1974."

Tlass urged his soldiers to be "ever ready for any battle with Israel."

His remarks were reported Sunday by official sources, who said he was addressing Syrian units of the Arab League peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

At the same time, the Syrian government announced that President Hafez Assad will visit Moscow later this month as a guest of the Soviet Union, Syria's main arms supplier. Assad is expected to seek more sophisticated weapons from the Soviets to match arms the United States is selling to Israel.

Meanwhile, in Jerusalem, Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government said it will seek changes in a tenative agreement with the United States and Egypt on the monitoring of Egyptian and Israeli forces in the Sinai Desert.

Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor said the cabinet accepted the agreement "in principle" at its regular weekly meeting but wants some revisions. He did not elaborate.

Details of the agreement have not been made public but it is known to include a stepped-up role for U.S. civilians now monitoring troop deployments in Sinai, as well as increased U.S. aerial reconnaissance in the Sinai areas Israel is to give back to Egypt by next January.

Washington forest fire breaks away

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — East winds picked up Monday to prevent containment of a 3,300-acre fire on rugged terrain in the Gifford Pinchot National Forest in southwest Washington State.

Meanwhile, the Washington Department of Natural Resources shut down logging operations in parts of Western Washington because of fire danger due to winds and dry conditions.

Late Monday, wind gusts reached 30 kilometres an hour.

"This has really fanned the fire," said Sandy Matheny, a United States Forest Service fire information officer. "Now, we don't have any idea when we expect to have it contained."

Bail set in S.A. 'slush' scandal

PRETORIA (Reuter) — The South African Supreme Court today fixed bail at $108,000 for former propaganda chief Eschel Rhoodie, who is appealing a six-year jail term for fraud.

Judge Charl Theron granted the bail on condition that Rhoodie not leave the Pretoria-Johannesburg area.

Rhoodie, the first man to receive a jail term as a result of the so-called slush funds scandal, was convicted Monday on five counts of misusing $90,000 in secret government funds. He was acquitted on two charges involving $12,000.

Legal sources said it appears unlikely that the appeal will be heard before next February or March.

Prosecutor Jan Nothling opposed the bail request, saying there is no guarantee Rhoodie will not leave the country. Rhoodie had earlier gone to Europe and was extradited from France in August to stand trial.

Chief defence counsel Johann Kriegler said Rhoodie has to stay in South Africa to defend his interests and those of his wife in state proceedings to confiscate their estates.

Rhoodie was convicted of using $39,000 of the funds to buy a seaside apartment, putting the rest into accounts held by himself, his wife, Katie, and his brother, Deneys.

Rhoodie argued that he paid out the cash from personal money to anonymous collaborators in secret propaganda projects and then reimbursed himself.

Rhoodie denied all charges and had threatened to make sensational disclosures during the trial.

Tired Pope safely home

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A tired Pope John Paul returned from a nine-day tour of Ireland and the United States on Monday to the cheers of thousands of people waving white handkerchiefs in sun-baked St. Peter's Square.

The pontiff hinted he would like to go back to the U.S. some time, saying he wants "more direct and familiar contact" with the American people.

Five hours after his return to the Vatican, the 59-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church went by helicopter to Castel Gandolfo to catch up on his rest in the seclusion of the papal estates in the Alban Hills 48 kilometres south of Rome. A Vatican spokesman said he will return here Wednesday for his general audience.

Pope John Paul was greeted by Italian Premier Francesco Cossiga and Rome's Communist Mayor Luigi Petroselli when he stepped off his TWA jetliner Shepherd I from Washington.

The Pope called the United States a "great country to which certainly corresponds an immense role and a great responsibility — because of its high level of welfare and technical progress — in the construction of a just world worthy of man."

The pontiff, who was welcomed by enormous, enthusiastic crowds during his tour of six U.S. cities, added: "The devoted and exultant welcome of the faithful and of the entire people of the United States has left in my soul the desire for a more direct and familar contact with these very dear children."

Before leaving the U.S., the Pope had regretted his schedule had to be limited to Boston, New York City, Philadelphia, Des Moines, Iowa, Chicago, and Washington.

Rev. Romeo Panciroli, chief Vatican spokesman, said aboard the papal plane that Pope John Paul's next trip abroad will be to the Philippines at a date to be set but that it will not take place this year.

The Pope's final day in the United States was marked by controversy when a leader of U.S. Roman Catholic nuns appealed to him to admit women to "all ministries of our church." The plea came from Sister Theresa Kane of Washington at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

The Vatican, in an apparent effort to emphasize remarks the Pope inserted into his speech to the nuns extolling the Virgin Mary, released the additions Monday.

"The woman who is honored as queen of the apostles, without being inserted into the hierarchal constitution of the church, and yet this woman made all hierarchy possible because she gave to the world the Shepherd and Bishop of our souls," the Pope said.

"This is the woman of history and destiny who inspires us today, the woman who speaks to us of femininity, human dignity and more, and who is the greatest expression of total consecration to Jesus Christ, in Whose name we are gathered today."

On departing Washington, Vatican sources said the Pope immediately went to his special compartment aboard the plane and retired exhausted after the first course of his meal.

The Pope also sought the quiet of Castel Gandolfo after returning from his previous trips abroad to Mexico and his native Poland.

Ahead of him lies a busy schedule. The pontiff was reported to have summoned all the cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church to Rome next month for an extraordinary meeting. There has been no official announcement, but Vatican observers speculate the pontiff may be planning to give a "state of the church" message to the cardinals.

U.K. rubbered band jumps safely

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A British quintet dubbed the Bungee Jumpers leaped off the Golden Gate Bridge — then bounced to safety thanks to thick rubber bands that stopped them short of San Francisco Bay.

Why the five — four men decked out in formal morning and top hats and a woman — yo-yoed from the rust-colored bridge remains unclear. A sixth member of the group did not get a chance to jump the 67 metres because he got tangled in his harness.

Three of the jumpers, who were picked up by the coast guard, were eventually cited by the California Highway Patrol for trespassing on the bridge cables.

Two more escaped in a private boat, authorities said.

But the high-spirited band apparently intend to let the citations bounce and plan to return to Britain today.

When the jumpers quit bobbing at the end of their elastic, or bungee cords, they let themselves down on ropes.

The awesome stunt from the spectacular suspension bridge startled hundreds of commuters.

Sniper hangs self in cell

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Wayne Cullinane, 22, the sniper who terrorized downtown San Francisco for 23 hours, hanged himself in his jail cell early today, police reported.

Cullinane's body was found in his cell in the jail at dawn. He had hanged himself with a bedsheet.

Cullinane was captured Saturday when he fell asleep after firing scores of bullets during a lengthy siege while he held a woman hostage in a 16th floor office.

Police credited a woman officer for having a calming influence over the sniper, whom, they said, was having hallucinations. Officer Maureen D'Amico, 28, who was participating for the first time as a member of the city's crisis team.

Dr. Chris Hatcher, a psychologist at the University of California's Langley Porter Neuropsychiatric Institute who directed the negotiations with the gunman, said it was probably the first time the peaceful outcome of such an incident can be credited to a woman.

Cullinane was captured Saturday after he had fallen asleep in the office of the state Workers Compensation Fund building.

Renewed arms race threatened

MOSCOW (AP) — A joint Soviet-East German communique issued Monday said Western failure to respond to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's newly-announced proposals for military cuts could "plunge Europe into a new dangerous round of the arms race."

The official Soviet news agency Tass carried the communique after Brezhnev returned here following a four-day visit to East Germany on the 30th anniversary of the founding of the Communist state.

In a speech Saturday in East Berlin, Brezhnev disclosed that the Soviet Union within a year would withdraw 20,000 Red Army troops and 1,000 Soviet tanks from East German territory.

He also said Moscow would be willing to reduce the number of Soviet medium-range missiles targeted at Western Europe if no additional medium-range missiles were added to NATO's nuclear arsenal.

Pointing to plans under discussion for possible deployment of Pershing-2 missiles in Europe, the Soviet-East German communique charged that the United States and West Germany "are engaged in a dangerous game."

"Naturally, any attempt to upset the existing military balance in Europe could not but cause retaliatory measures from the other side," the communique warned.

Earlier, President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, said the United States "intends to proceed" with a plan to deploy missiles in Western Europe despite the Soviet announcement that it will remove up to 20,000 troops and 1,000 tanks from East Germany.

While careful not to criticize the Soviet Union, Brzezinski said Sunday that the Soviet statement that the troops and tanks will be withdrawn in the next year is partly intended to "forestall" a Western buildup.

Western analysts estimate the Soviet Union has 383,000 troops in East Germany and officials say the withdrawal of up to 20,000 troops will still leave the Soviet Union with an advantage over the United States 7th Army, which has 203,000 men, but not an advantage over all NATO armies combined.

However, such calculations do not include other Soviet weaponry in Eastern bloc nations, which appear to hold an upper hand over the military strength of Western Europe.

A December deadline has been set for a decision by NATO to deploy the new weapons, including Pershing missiles and cruise missiles. The program is designed to counter Soviet SS-20 missiles, which can reach Western Europe.

Brezhnev wants NATO to suspend the program until an effort has been made to negotiate limits on U.S. and Soviet systems in the region.

Exhaustion fells Everest scalers

KATMANDU (AP) — An American climber and his woman companion have died on Mount Everest after successfully reaching the summit of the world's highest peak.

Officials in the Nepalese tourism ministry identified the two as Raymond Edward Genet, 48, of Talkeetna, Alaska, and Hannelore Schmatz, 38, of West Germany.

A tourism ministry spokesman gave this account:

Genet and Mrs. Schmatz, 38-year-old wife of the expedition leader, reached the summit Tuesday. Exhausted by the morning climb, they pitched camp at the 8,382-metre level along with a Sherpa guide identified as Sundare.

The next morning, Mrs. Schmatz and Sundare found Genet frozen to death. The survivors tried to make it back to the South Col camp, but an hour after they began the descent Mrs. Schmatz collapsed and died.

Ohira rejects call to quit

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira is resisting pressure from within his faction-riddled Liberal Democratic party to resign after unexpected reverses in Sunday's general election.

Government sources said the 69-year-old prime minister told a brief cabinet meeting today that he humbly accepts the "unexpectedly severe result" of the voting.

Ohira, despite warnings from other party leaders, called the election in an effort to increase the party's representation from 249 to 271 seats in the 511 member lower house of parliament, thus providing it with the legislative authority to introduce controversial economic and social bills.

His gamble failed when the Japanese electorate gave the Liberal Democrats 248 seats, plunging the party into what one authoritative Japanese newspaper has described as its greatest crisis since it was formed 24 years ago.

The party will continue in government with the aid of conservative independents.

Ohira consulted with his closest political advisers on his future course today and they later said that he plans to continue in office despite pressure from within the party for his resignation.

The advisers, including Cabinet Secretary Rokusuke Tanaka, said that Ohira will begin discussions with other faction leaders next week on what to do about the party's reverses.

Bennett talks coal in Korea

SEOUL (AP) — Premier Bill Bennett arrived in the South Korean capital today at the head of a seven-member economic mission.

The mission, which earlier visited Japan, will meet senior government officials and industrial leaders during four days of talks aimed at boosting economic co-operation between the province and South Korea.

The group, which includes Economic Development Minister Donald Phillips, will also be attempting to attract capital investment to B.C., particularly in coal mines.

Three B.C. coal suppliers are scheduled to to sign sales contracts with the state-run Korea Electric Co. on Wednesday in the presence of Bennett and other members of the mission.

The suppliers are Kaiser Resources Ltd., Fording Coal Ltd. and Crows Nest Ltd.

Rhodesian guerrillas get 48-hour deadline

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, staving off collapse of the Zimbabwe Rhodesia peace talks, today gave the Patriotic Front guerrillas a 48-hour deadline to change their minds and accept a British-proposed independence constitution.

At a meeting attended by all the parties, Carrington said Britain will conduct no further negotiations on the constitution for its breakaway former colony and that he must have the guerrillas' answer before the month-old talks can continue.

A guerrilla spokesmen responded to the ultimatum by maintaining that Carrington, the conference chairman, is "absurd" to demand a firm answer.

He indicated the guerrillas will continue to seek to shelve the constitutional dispute and get the discussion turned to who will control the army and administration before British-granted independence — a move Carrington has firmly rejected.

Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, co-leaders of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance, objected Monday to two points favoring the white minority in the constitution proposed by Britain for its former African colony.

One provides for all white settlers to automatically become citizens of the new country. The other guarantees financial compensation for property seized by a new black government from white owners.

The guerrilla leaders also renewed their demand, made at the start of the talks, that the constitutional negotiations be shelved while they, the British and Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa negotiate the establishment of a new transitional government to replace Muzorewa's biracial government until new elections are held.

A British spokesman said his government will consider carefully the Patriotic Front's proposals. But Carrington told Nkomo and Mugabe it would be "misleading to suggest there is any realistic prospect of agreement" on any constitution that differs materially from the draft Britain put forward last Wednesday.

He also rejected the guerrilla leaders' demand to change the course of the talks, saying: "We should not be prepared to open discussion on pre-independence areas until there is an agreement on the constitution."

Muzorewa, who accepted the British draft last week, sat silently through the meeting. But he said in a written statement he had done everything "and more" that Britain demanded, and he called on the British government to immediately lift the economic and diplomatic sanctions which it and other countries imposed after then-Prime Minister Ian Smith declared Rhodesia independent 14 years ago in an attempt to preserve white control.

Meanwhile, black guerrillas launched two mortar attacks early today on the garrison city of Umtali, near the eastern border with Mozambique, damaging a motel and four houses but causing no injuries.

An emergency broadcast over Radio Umtali said the guerrillas fired six mortar rounds at the Aloe Park Motel on the northern outskirts of the city in the first attack, smashing the roofs of three occupied cabins.

The second incident began two hours later when guerrillas, presumably from the same group, fired another mortar salvo on the city from the north, and were engaged by security forces for about an hour.

Talks worry S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Foreign Minister Pik Botha responded to a report of possible South African military intervention today by saying South Africa is gravely concerned about the latest developments in the London peace talks.

"The situation threatens the stability and progress of all the countries of southern Africa," he said.

The foreign minister's statement coincided with a Johannesburg newspaper report that raised the spectre of South African military intervention in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia if the talks break down.

The Star newspaper quoted Pretoria sources — a euphemism for a senior cabinet official — as saying there was growing concern that collapse of the talks would spark a white exodus from Zimbabwe-Rhodesia and the fall of Bishop Abel Muzorewa's government.

The Star said that if Muzorewa fell and a white exodus occurred, South Africa's parliament would be recalled to ratify what the prime minister has called "action to counter a takeover by forces of chaos and confusion."

Increased air fares sought

CANNES (AP) — Increased passenger fares and freight rates on many European and North Atlantic air routes have been recommended by the International Air Transport Association.

An IATA spokesman said today the increases are to meet rising fuel costs.

The rate increases, to take effect Jan. 1, 1980, must be approved by governments and the IATA announcement gave only general increases, without individual route details.

On passenger fares between the United States and Europe, a range of increases between three and seven per cent was recommended.

On Canada-Europe fares, the increase would generally be three per cent, the spokesman said.

Britain, which received only six per cent of the 10-per-cent rise for fuel costs which it sought last July, won agreement for a recommended four-per-cent increase on European routes.

On freight rates, the spokesman said, there was no agreement on increases on U.S.-European routes. Between Canada and Europe, the recommendation was for five per cent increase but with no increase for Greece, Yugoslavia and Italy.

Increases in Europe will generally be three per cent, the spokesman said.

The IATA meeting continues for about another month, in a general review of the whole structure of passenger fares worldwide from April 1, 1980.

Clark pledges power to provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Joe Clark's new Conservative government pledged today to give more power to the provinces, promote individual initiative and restore "growth, confidence and jobs to the Canadian economy."

In the policy-previewing speech from the throne, written by Clark and read by Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer at the opening of the 31st Parliament, Clark promised "a new era in federal-provincial relations" — in which consultation would be the hallmark — and immediate action to deal with the troubled economy.

"My ministers believe the greatest immediate challenge facing Canada today is to restore growth, confidence and jobs to the Canadian economy," said the throne speech opening the 31st Parliament.

Clark promised a five-part economic strategy that would include getting government spending under control, co-operation with labor and business to encourage growth of the private sector, more job-creation programs, improved regional transportation and actions to ensure the country is self-sufficient in energy by 1990.

The speech was largely a repetition of promises made by Clark during the May 22 election campaign and pointed to about two dozen separate pieces of planned legislation. But a campaign promise of $2 billion in personal income-tax cuts was not mentioned.

The speech was strong on the themes that Clark developed while in opposition — more rights for the provinces, more power for individual members of the Commons and greater public access to government information.

"My ministers were given a mandate to change the direction of the government of Canada," the speech said.

"The basic purposes of that change will be to enhance the rights, freedoms and opportunities of individual Canadians, and re-establish the spirit of partnership and renewal which are fundamental to our federation."

The speech observed that the Clark government had already handed the provinces lotteries and that coastal provinces had been given jurisdiction over offshore resources.

But the provinces will also be given a greater say in development of telecommunications policy and will take part with business and labor in a National Economic Development Conference at an unspecified date.

Measures will stimulate energy development and distribution to attain energy self-sufficiency. But the government "accepts and respects provincial jurisdiction over resources as it accepts its own responsibility to ensure economic stability, competitive advantage and other national objectives."

As expected, the government promised freedom-of-information legislation permit public access to the vast storehouse of material within the federal bureaucracy. Limitations on release of secret material would be specific and any dispute over access would be "resolved independently of the government."

Bank prime to record 13¾%

Expected to rise to 15% by year-end

Canadian banks today raised their prime lending rates to 13.75 per cent, up three-quarters of a point, and further increases seemed certain.

They were reacting to a Bank of Canada announcement this morning that its rate had gone up three-quarters of a point to a record 13 per cent. Increases by the chartered banks are virtually automatic.

The Royal Bank has already raised its prime rate to 14.75 per cent in the United States, although it was holding to 13.75 per cent in Canada, at least for today.

A spokesman for the bank said the Canadian prime rate could be in the range of 15 to 15.5 per cent by Christmas.

The Canadian hikes are in tandem with those in the U.S. where the huge Chase Manhattan bank today increased its prime rate to 14.5 per cent.

The rate increases in both countries are designed to protect Canadian and American currencies, under attack because of the rising price of gold.

The Royal today said it will increase the rate it pays customers for pure savings accounts to 10.75 per cent retroactive to Oct. 1 and to 11 per cent on Nov. 1.

All rates are all-time records.

Other banks today announced increases to 13.75 per cent for their prime rates and other rates are also expected to increase to approximately those offered or charged by the Royal.

The mortgage rate is holding at 13 per cent but is under pressure for a further increase.

The 10.25 per cent interest rate offered on Canada Savings Bonds almost certainly would have to be increased, bank spokesmen said.

The Canadian interest rate increases were triggered by an announcement by Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada that he must raise the central bank's lending rate three-quarters of a point to a record 13 per cent, although he is aware the high level of interest rates in the country is hurting individuals and businesses.

The rate was raised to 12.25 per cent on Sept. 10.

This is the second bank-rate increase in less than a month and the third since the Ferry workers continue strikes

Rotating ferry strikes will continue until a contract is signed, union president Shirley Mathieson said today.

Resumption of talks today with mediator Fred Geddes will not interfere with the walkouts, she said.

The union closed the Deas ferry maintenance dock in Richmond today and have announced targets for the rest of the week.

The are:

Wednesday: The B.C. Ferries head office in Victoria, the Vancouver ferry information service and the ferry run linking the Lower Mainland with Powell River.

Thursday: Ferry service from Horseshoe Bay, Nanaimo and Langdale terminals.

Friday: Ferry service from Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen.

Mathieson said reports of a full-scale walkout by the union are erroneous. She said two rebel members at Horseshoe Bay have been phoning Vancouver radio stations alleging that a full-scale walkout is imminent.

"We have no plans for a full strike at this time. We will continue rotating strikes until a contract is signed."

Jobless numbers decline nationally — not in B.C.

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of those unable to find work fell for the sixth consecutive month in September to 719,000 from 772,000 in August.

This reduced the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate to a three-year low of 7.1 per cent, Statistics Canada reported today.

However, British Columbia's unemployment rate rose last month to 7.7 per cent from 7.4 per cent in August.

And, despite steady improvement in the jobless situation since early spring, Canada's unemployment rate remains higher than most others in the industrialized world.

Latest available figures show 6-per-cent unemployment in the United States and Australia, 5.3 per cent in Britain, 3.7 per cent in West Germany and two per cent in Japan.

The last time the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate, the government's usual indicator of the seriousness of unemployment, fell to 7.1 per cent was in September, 1976.

Seasonal adjustment means the rate compensates for predictable seasonal fluctuations in the job situation such as the beginning of the school year or freeze-up.

The number with jobs in September was 10.53 million compared with 10.91 million in August. The drop reflected primarily the removal of student workers from the job force with the end of summer vacations.

As always, regionally depressed areas and young job-seekers suffered most of the burden. The jobless rate in Newfoundland, for example, was 14.1 per cent — almost twice the national average.

For those in the 15-to-24 age bracket, the unemployment rate was 12.3 per cent.

Unemployment rates for September across Canada were:

— Newfoundland, 14.1 per cent from 14.4 per cent in August.

— Prince Edward Island, 10.6 per cent from 11.0 per cent.

— Nova Scotia, 10.2 per cent from 10.5 per cent.

— New Brunswick, 10.7 per cent from 11.5 per cent.

— Quebec, 9.1 per cent from 8.8 per cent.

— Ontario, 6.1 per cent from 6.5 per cent.

— Manitoba, 5.0 per cent from 5.5 per cent.

— Saskatchewan, 3.9 per cent from 3.7 per cent.

— Alberta, 3.7 per cent from 3.8 per cent.

Ferry came too fast out of fog — boater

By AB KENT
Times Staff

The ferry that ran down a Sidney couple's wooden cruiser Saturday emerged from a fogbank too fast to manoeuvre in the eastern entrance to Active Pass, the boat owner said today.

Brien Baker, 8549 Lochside, said he and his wife Wilma were heading out of the pass and decided to turn back when they saw the fog. Baker was at the controls of their twin-inboard Chris-Craft and was in radio contact with another vessel when his wife saw the Queen of Sidney bearing down on their stern about a ship's length away.

Visibility was about 500-600 feet, Baker said.

"We were going in the same direction. They came out of the fog and unfortunately we didn't hear or see them until they were right on top of us," Baker said.

The cruiser was travelling about half-speed at 10 knots.

He said the ship caught the cruiser broad along the starboard side, trapping the cabin and control area under the overhang.

"It dragged us down three quarters the length of the ferry," Baker said.

The craft disengaged only when Baker cut power to one of his engines, leaving the top of the boat a crumpled tangle.

Baker stayed at the controls but his wife was almost thrown out as the boat tipped to a 45 degree angle. Her hand was cut as she struggled to hang on.

"She was a real trouper. She got right below and got the life jackets," Baker said. But she has not slept for three nights since, he added.

Baker said he thought the ferry was "going too fast to miss us."

The captain could not manoeuvre to starboard because he was too close to shore, and if he had turned to port he would have struck the cruiser broadside - "he would have killed us," Baker said.

The entire superstructure of the boat was sheared away, taking control panel, windows, cabin, cockpit rail and stoving in the dinghy.

Baker has started proceedings against the ferry corporation.

Swearing sentence 6 years?

ISTANBUL (Reuter) — A 41-year-old British woman is being held in Turkey for swearing at airline officials at Istanbul airport after she and her two teenage sons were crowded out of their reserved flight home to London, sources said today.

Mrs. Abide Mehmet, a Londoner of Cypriot origin, has been in Istanbul's notorious Sagmalcilar Prison for more than a month without being charged. She faces up to six years in jail if convicted, the sources said.

She was part of a group of more than 30 Britons turfed off Turkish Airlines flight from Istanbul to London.

Mehmet is expected to be charged with insulting the Turkish nation.

Gold ends steep dive

Gold halted its dramatic slide today by edging up in the London and Zurich markets, ending a decline that saw it lose $13 dollars Monday.

The metal opened at $375 per ounce in London, up from Monday's close of $374.50.

A real bombshell

In Fort McMurray in northern Alberta, Frank and Marie Culleton's biggest problem — besides the weather — was bears in the back yard.

After moving here in August, they have a new worry in their yard at 2273 Dalhousie — artillery projectiles.

Mrs. Culleton was planting bulbs around an old pear tree on Sunday when her hoe struck a metal object.

She dug around a bit more and came up with a badly-rusted, foot-long projectile.

"I realized right away what it was," she said today.

She first thought it it was just a souvenir a previous owner had left.

"But then I began to remember all the horror stories in England of people digging up things and leaving them about with sometimes disastrous results."

She called Oak Bay police. They took one look and alerted the Armed Forces bomb squad.

The squad members identified the projectile as a 12-pounder, probably of First World War vintage. It was harmless because the casing containing the explosives was long gone.

The bomb squad carted it away, and was to return with detectors to sweep the garden for any more strange objects.

Socred heavies hit ELUC's farmland move

. . .'more attention'

Two prominent Socreds say they are worried by a provincial cabinet committee's removal of prime Fraser Valley farmland from the agricultural land reserve.

Cyril Shelford, agriculture minister until his defeat in the May 10 provincial election, and Bill Ritchie, MLA for Central Fraser Valley, have joined other critics of the cabinet's Environment and Land Use Committee which overturned a B.C. Land Commission decision and released 626 acres for an industrial park.

Shelford said the land commission does not belong under Environment Minister Rafe Mair's control and should be returned to the agriculture ministry.

The cabinet committee, headed by Mair, is not paying enough attention to agricultural needs when processing appeals to get land out of the reserve, he said.

Ritchie, a possible agriculture minister in a cabinet shuffle expected next month, said he is puzzled by the committee's decision to release the land which has high farming potential.

Mair said today he missed the July 4 meeting where the decision was made to free the land.

And as far as he's concerned, the matter is closed.

"The decision was made by my cabinet colleagues. I don't have the power to overrule them."

Mair said he is "only the chairman, not the president. I'm not a czar."

ELUC vice-chairman Alex Fraser, the highways minister, presided at the meeting.

Gary Runka, land commission member and former chairman, announced Friday he was resigning to protest the removal of the land from the reserve following the appeal by Gloucester Properties Ltd.

Runka said the removal was the last straw in his growing frustration and disillusionment in the government's lack of support for the commission.

"That's some of the best farmland in the Fraser Valley," he said. "If that's allowed to go, what the hell are we (the commissioners) doing wasting our time?"

Until the government changes the appeal process and restores some of the power the commission lost two years ago, appeals to the committee will continue to grow, he said.

In September, 1977, amendments to the Land Commission Act gave the environment ministry authority to allow cabinet appeals on commission decisions while under the old act, an appeal required leave from at least two land commissioners.

Fraser told reporters last week that he has walked through the 626 acres in question and said it is not viable farmland.

Land commission officials, however, point out that the adjacent 2,000 acres are under heavy cultivation.

Andres tries to quack U.K.

LONDON (UPI) — Canadian High Commissioner Paul Martin sang the praises of Baby Duck Tuesday as Andres Wines popped the cork on a million-pound promotional campaign to crack the British market.

"I think Baby Duck is a great wine, I hope they send me two or three cases," Martin confided at a tasting and reception in London's Grosvenor Square.

Baby Duck, a carbonated blend of red and white grape wines, was developed by Andres about eight years ago. It has been Canada's best-selling wine for six years.

Andres, Canada's leading vintner, is putting $2.14 million, into the fight, with the aim of creating a new market sector for the product.

The sales effort will be handled jointly by Whitbread's Take Home Division, appointed by Andres to break into grocery chains, co-operatives, and cash-and-carry sectors, and Matthew Clark and Sons Ltd., who will tackle the liquor stores trade.

"I think Baby Duck will be highly successful in Britain and will compete highly against existing standard brands in the near future," said Andres president Peter Green.

Asked about moving into wine-producing countries of France, Spain, and Italy, Green said, "Naturally we are thinking about this and eventually (we are) hoping to put Baby Duck into these markets. But at the moment we are concentrating on the British market."

Andres plans an $1.63 million advertising campaign. The company test-marketed Baby Duck in the Harlech area of Wales last year.

"It was the very positive results of that test that have convinced Andres Wines that there is a future in Britain for Baby Duck," Green said.

"We believe that Baby Duck will become the next in a series of major new markets in Britain — similar to the vodka, vermouth, lager and white rum phenomena," said John Heggie, Andres senior vice president.

"Like all of these, it meets the tastes of the new generation of consumers who prefer light, refreshing drinks to the stronger traditional flavors. All were created by major brands already successful abroad, all backed by major advertising investment."

Gas hike protested

SEATTLE (AP) — Officials of the Washington Natural Gas Co. will ask B.C. to help press its case for a cut in the price of Canadian natural gas exported to the U.S., a company official says.

Spokesman Ron Norwood says executives from the the utility planned to meet today with the B.C. Energy Commission in the hope the commission will recommend a price cut to the National Energy Board in Ottawa.

The price of Canadian gas exported south of the border is due to rise 23.2 per cent, to $3.45 U.S. a thousand cubic feet from $2.80, on Nov. 3.

Norwood said during the weekend the Canadian price increase will mean an average increase of 10 per cent in the price Puget Sound area consumers pay for their gas. This increase, subject to approval by state and federal agencies, would come on top of one posted Oct. 1.

The Washington utility receives about 62 per cent of its gas from Canada. Canada exports about one trillion cubic feet of gas to the U.S. a year, amounting to about five per cent of U.S. total gas consumption.

Bank prime up to 13¾%

Conservatives came to power in May.

It follows an announcement Saturday by the U.S. Federal Reserve Board that it was raising the discount rate in that country to 12 per cent — its highest ever.

Since March, 1978, the Canadian bank rate has been raised 10 times from eight per cent.

The Bank of Canada resisted an increase in interest rates two weeks ago when the Federal Reserve Board announced a previous half-per-cent increase in its lending rate. But Bouey said today he felt the central bank had to match its U.S. counterpart this time.

By raising its rate, the central bank signals the chartered banks and other lending institutions that it wishes them to charge their borrowers more, discouraging credit buying and tightening the amount of money circulating in the marketplace.

The chartered banks normally follow the central bank's example within one or two days. This has pushed their prime lending rate — the interest charged to their blue-chip corporate borrowers — to 13.75 per cent.

Most other interest rates, inuding those for consumer loans, mortgages and the interest banks pay their depositors, can also be expected to rise.

Bouey said in a news release the 0.75-per-cent increase was needed to fight inflation and to keep the dollar from sliding on world currency markets.

Referring to the U.S. increase, Bouey said: "While short-term interest rates can sometimes move differently in the two countries, there are severe limits to the degree to which Canada can matintain short-term interest rates lower than those in the United States when Canada is as dependent as it currently is on inflows of capital from abroad to finance the large international payments deficit on its current account."

Finance Minister John Crosbie has predicted the country will have an international payments deficit of $7 billion this year, but recent unfavorable economic developments have convinced many economists this estimate is too optimistic.

Two Que. MPs get Clark plums

GRAFFTEY
. . .Science, technology

OTTAWA (UPC) — Prime Minister Joe Clark has made last-minute changes in preparation for today's opening of Parliament, promoting Quebec cabinet minister Heward Grafftey and naming 22 Tory MPs as parliamentary secretaries.

Grafftey, who had held the obscure post of social programs, took over the science and technology portfolio from Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn. Prime Minister Joe Clark said Hnatyshyn did not have time for both posts.

Among the backbenchers named Monday to the $5,600-a-year secretary posts, where they perform tasks for the minister when he is not available, was Richard Janelle. Janelle, who will also receive the standard MP's income of $41,300, switched last month to the Conservatives from the Quebec-based Social Credit party.

Clark had opposed the parliametary secretaries' posts when he was in opposition but said he discovered during the summer how "valuable they could be to the government."

Grafftey's social programs portfolio, which had never been clearly defined, was abolished only four months after its creation. Clark said plans to appoint a "superminister" to oversee social programs and spending made it unnecessary.

That new position is expected to go to David Macdonald, the present secretary of state, but must wait several weeks for legislation creating the new job, Clark said.

Grafftey, one of only two Conservatives elected in Quebec, repeated the Conservative election campaign charge that Canadian spending on research and development is too low. However, the new minister said, "I'm not saying at this early date we should be spending a lot more."

Among the new secretaries is Tom Siddon, B.C. MP for Richmond-South Delta, who goes to Fisheries Minister James McGrath, a Newfoundlander.

The schedule for the day-long ceremonies opening the 31st Parlimanet began in the Senate, with the swearing-in of the government members who include three members of Clark's cabinet.

James Jerome, the veteran Liberal Speaker, will continue the same role in the new Parliament despite a different government. The MPs' election today of Jerome and Liberal Gerald Laniel as his deputy had been agreed to last week.

'Lettergate' meeting held

Social Credit caucus chairman Jack Kempf (Omineca) cut short a Campbell River fishing holiday today to meet with Socred research chief Jack Kelly over what is being called "lettergate."

Kelly was placed on a forced holiday two weeks ago after it became public he had suggested loyal Socreds practise "dirty tricks" to promote the party cause.

Other party members now feel president Les Keen should resign because he had knowledge of the tricks advocated by the party researchers for more than a year.

Duncan Myers, president of the Shuswap-Revelstoke Social Credit Association, said on the weekend Keen should have taken action after attending a seminar a year ago during which members were instructed on how to write phoney letters to newspapers.

"Keen was at the campaign meeting and didn't do anything after," Myers said. "He's had a year to do something about it."

About 170 copies of a tape recording of Kelly's speech were later distributed to party members.

Myers said he is not satisfied with Keen's response that Kelly's statements should have been edited from the tape.

Keen must take responsibility for the tapes, whether they were distributed with his consent or not, he said.

"We need a person in there (as president) who knows what's going on," said Myers.

"I'm new to the party; maybe I'm a greenhorn. But I want to make it clear that our members are not party to that garbage."

Among other things Kelly told a Socred constituency meeting a couple of weeks ago was that letters to newspapers be sent over false names if the sender wanted to remain anonymous.

He later said that neither he nor other party staffers — Ellen Mackay and Glen Mitchell — ever used the method themselves.

Meanwhile, Premier Bill Bennett's communications planning adviser, Dave Brown, has denied in a telephone interview from Tokyo that the premier's office authorized use of the dirty tricks letter-writing tactic.

Power to the provinces

The speech promised changes in the rules of Parliament to increase the resources and the powers of parliamentary committees — a key theme of Conservatives while in opposition — and greater freedom for MPs to introduce legislation, the so-called private members bills.

First part of the thrust towards more responsibility for backbench MPs would be creation of four special committees to look into the needs of the handicapped, to examine ways to strengthen the role of the voluntary social groups, to study current policies on foreign ownership including the role of the Foreign Investment Review Agency, and to look for ways to prevent cost overruns on major government projects.

These four committees will be asked to report by early next year.

Clark also made good on another campaign promise by announcing that a joint Commons-Senate committee will be given the chore of "a broad inquiry" into the future development of nuclear energy in Canada.

In addition, standing committees of the Commons will be asked to examine cultural policy, Canadian foreign policy and pensions.

Another Commons committee would be asked to look into ways to strengthen committee powers, how to make ministers more accountable and whether there should be a permanent Commons Speaker.

Also pledged is greater accountability to the Commons on the government's spending plans. Commons committees would get the right to examine the annual reports of Crown corporations. There will also be committee review of the annual reports of the commissioner of official languages and the Economic Council of Canada.

The government says annual estimates of government spending, presented to the Commons each February, will be in more understandable form. And they will also contain spending projections for the succeeding four years "so that you can judge the probably impact of today's decisions on tomorrow's economy."

Bright new look but still a jail for kids

PHILLIPS
. . . it's not a cure

By DEREK SIDENIUS

The old grey Juvenile Detention Home at 1125 Pembroke just isn't what it used to be.

Gone is its drab and dreary look.

All is bright and light and even cheerful now, the result of a $250,000 face-lift.

The public had its first glimpse of what the summer-long renovations have produced when members of the centre's volunteer group held an Open House last week.

It was a bit premature. The work was supposed to have been completed in time fro the event but construction has dragged on longer than expected. The actual opening date is still anyone's guess. Some say the middle of the month; others the end.

However, that didn't deter more than 600 guests who passed through the doors in a 6½-hour period.

JDH at first blush is almost bearable but it's still a jail for kids. As director Del Phillips acknowledges: "The JDH isn't meant to be a fun place."

In the old days everything about the home was inadequate. Staff quarters were cramped. Kitchen appliances were always breaking down. Meals were served in the inmate day rooms on rickety tables. The outdoor playing area had such a slope to it play was next to impossible. The toilet and shower facilities were abominable and most cells were unfurnished. Inmates slept on the floor. There was no fire exit in either of the two cell blocks.

The renovations have created a separate wing for staff, both indoor and outdoor visiting areas, a new classroom with a small lab and six study stalls, a large arts and crafts room, three interview and meeting rooms, a modern, well-equipped kitchen, spacious dining room, games room and a place where inmates, visitors and staff can prepare light snacks at night.

The interior throughout has been painted a soft ivory. Door frames are accentuated bright red, blue, yellow and green.

Windows have been placed in cells along outside walls; inside cells have skylights. The panes are made of an unbreakable plastic.

There's an intercom to all public rooms. It can be used to listen in as well as give messages or pipe in music.

There's a sophisticated fire alarm and detection system as well. In an emergency an operator can unlock all cells and fire doors simultaneously with the turn of a key.

For staff there's a trouble alarm system. Staff members will carry a small plastic box with them as they make their rounds. If they get into a situation they can't handle and need help they can press a button on the box which activates by remote control a piercing alarm in the control room.

Another new feature is an empty room for kids who become aggressive. The room will have a punching bag. Foam rubber padding will line the walls. Youngsters who act up will be confined to the room for periods up to 15 minutes. If that doesn't cure them, they'll be put in one of two unfurnished observation cells. The stay there is open-ended.

The centre has been newly furnished with light-weight plastic chairs and sofas. A standard cell will have a small desk, chair and a bed.

Some cynics are putting bets on how long the furniture will last. The reason beds weren't in the cells before was most had been taken apart and smashed by the inmates.

Some of rules have been changed, too.

When a youngster is admitted he'll be given four choices. He can either attend school — two hours in the morning and two in the afternoon; he can spend the time doing arts and crafts; he can go on kitchen or clean-up duty, or he can sit in his cell all day long and do nothing.

Under the old rules the time was unstructured. Inmates could, if they wanted, watch television for hours on end. Most did.

Television now will be strictly controlled.

The renovations and changes are the result of the provincial government's decision last February to bring back industrial training schools for juvenile offenders.

The schools were abolished in 1969 and over the 10-year period that followed, judges were unable to impose jail terms on juveniles.

As a consequence JDH and other youth detention centres around the province were nothing more than remand centres, places to hold juveniles in custody while they were awaiting trial. Stays seldom exceeded a week.

Under the new law JDH has been redesignated. It will continue to be a remand facility but will also be a training school for sentenced offenders. That means potentially longer stays, up to two years in some cases.

The capacity remains the same — 20. Phillips expects a 50-50 split in remand and sentenced population.

The physical improvements don't mean the JDH will have any greater success in getting juveniles to mend their ways.

"The object of containment is not rehabilitation," says Phillips. "Institutions never cure people. They are not a solution. They can provide no more than protection for the community.

"All we can do is try to minimize the damage containment can have on the kids."

TOWN TALK

Visitors to the Royal London Wax Museum here will have to wait a while before they see Prime Minister Joe Clark in the ranks of the celebrities.

Clark must survive the opening rounds of parliamentary debate before he is considered for inclusion in the museum.

If he does, a Tussaud's expert in London will take one of his suits, note his exact measurements, weight and height and begin work on the effigy and a duplicate will be sent to the Victoria museum.

Although the process will take at least three months, Clark shouldn't be discouraged — an effigy of Trudeau wasn't made until November, 1969 — 19 months after he took office as prime minister.

Veteran travellers on B.C. ferries are wondering when the ferry corporation will get around to replacing its ancient chairs.

The chairs, says one passenger, aren't comfortable enough to even doze in.

He wonders why the corporation can't break down and buy aircraft-style chairs with adjustable backs. And he won't buy the argument that such chairs would take up too much room.

"Ferry trips for people who make them on a regular basis are a big yawn. If you don't want to read one of the blah magazines they sell, there's nothing to do but shut your eyes and pray for journey's end," he said.

The high number of people who attended the Victoria Juvenile Detention Home open house last week didn't come as any surprise to Bernice Yates, staff member in charge of volunteer programs.

Yates says interest in juvenile problems, particularly among young adults, has mushroomed in the past year.

Nowhere is the trend more clearly demonstrated than the volunteer force attached to the JDH.

Last year there were between 50 to 60 active members. Now there are 96, making it is the largest volunteer group in the corrections system in the province.

Two-thirds of the volunteers are under the age of 35 and most of them are men.

Yates says the volunteers put in thousands of hours of work, assisting staff with in-house programs, visiting inmates, and helping look after juveniles when they are released from custody.

Canada Permanent Trust Co. is conducting a student writing contest and the Victoria branch will kick in an extra $125 if the provincial winner comes from Vancouver Island.

That's in addition to the $500 prize for the best entry in each province. The best in Canada gets an extra $500.

Victoria branch manager Hamish Manson says he got the idea for the special $125 award because he wanted to encourage local entries and because the company will be 125 years old next year. Contest rules can be obtained by writing The Permanent, 1125 Douglas.

Integrated studies probably mean little to most of us.

But the University of Waterloo (no, Napoleon didn't enrol there) in Waterloo, Ont., is looking for people who were involved in the program, which was (and still is) "for students who wish to explore their individual interests using the resources of the university and the community (with or without formal courses). Does that sound like fooling around?

Anyway, Integrated Studies at the U of W is celebrating its 10th anniversary Nov. 2-3, and wants people who were a part of the program to contact them. The postal code is N2L3G1.

City's jobless dips

The Victoria unemployment rate in September was 6.5 per cent, down from 8.1 per cent in the same month last year, the local Canada Employment Centre said today.

The figures represent actual unemployment and are not seasonally adjusted. The rate compares with an actual rate of 6.8 per cent for British Columbia.

The local Canada Employment Centre had 8,260 people on it rolls as looking for work in September, down from 8,380 in the same month last year.

During September, there were 899 new jobs listed at the centre, up from 870 in September, 1978, manager Wally Pickering said today.

Sturrock eyes reform

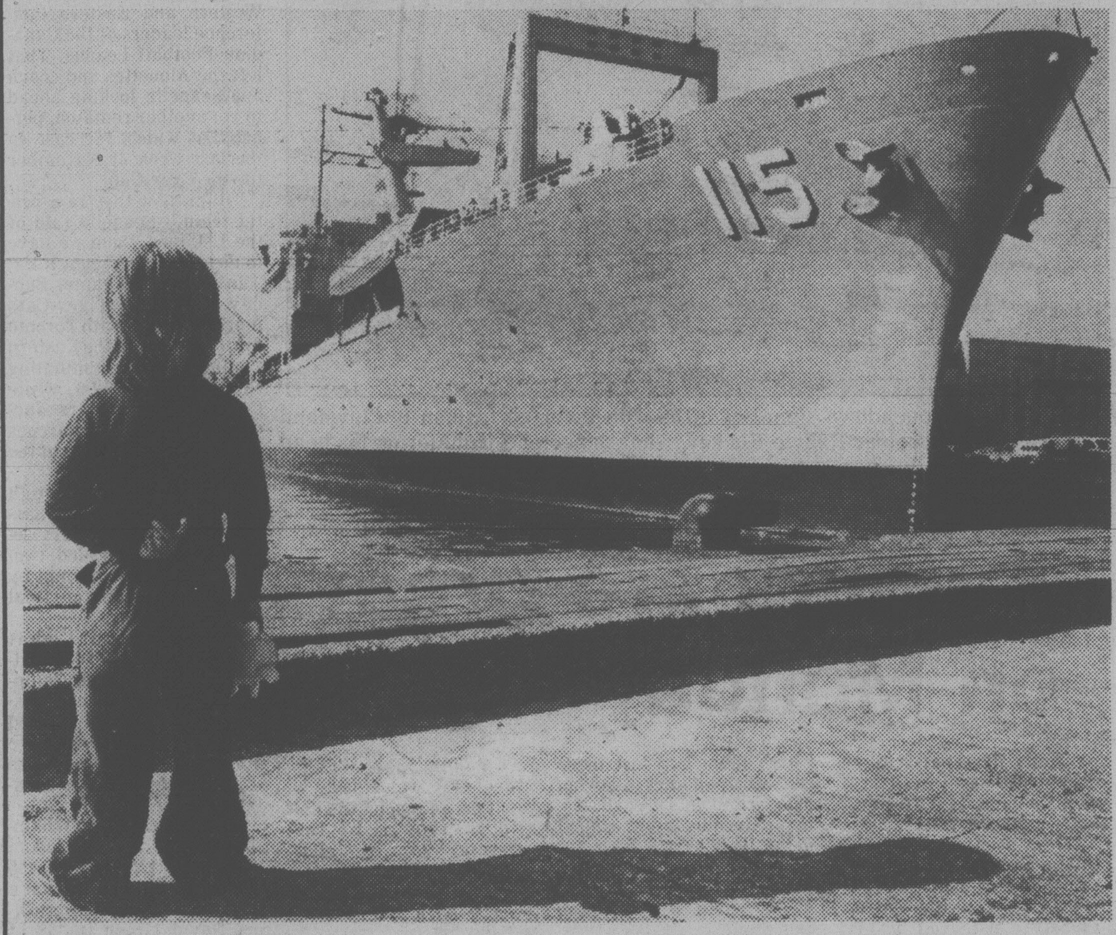
Saanich Ald. Howard Sturrock is running for re-election to council on a platform of administrative reform at city hall and greater progress on municipal planning, he said today.

"My major interest is in making progress with the community plan," Sturrock said in an interview.

The "broad brush" community plan for the whole municipality is completed, and now Saanich will work on more detailed plans for neighborhoods, said Sturrock.

Sturrock said much of the disagreement that has plagued Saanich lately is the result of confusion over planning for the future.

He also said he supports a change at city hall to the manager system, under which all department heads would report to council through a municipal manager acting as chief of staff. Victoria uses this system.



LURE OF THE SEA could be going through this youngster's mind as he looks over USS Mobile, a cargo and troop carrier that was open to the public on the weekend at Ogden Point. Mobile was one of several U.S. warships to dock at Ogden and Esquimalt following Kernel Potlach II exercises involving 40,000 Canadian and American servicemen off the north end of Vancouver Island last week. More than 1,200 Canadian soldiers and U.S. marines splashed ashore to establish beachheads on the Island's northern tip during mock amphibious landings. (John McKay photo).

Fleet work on fire

Memo to the U.S. navy:

You can come back and play fireman any time.

Four sailors are credited with extinguishing a fire Sunday night that caused $3,000 damage to the Beaconville Apartments, 605 Douglas.

Deputy chief Fred Severson said today they spotted smoke coming from suite No. 5 from their room next door at the Queen Victoria Inn and went to the rescue about 7:20 p.m. after turning in the alarm.

They broke down the door and used a hose connected to the building's standpipe to put out the fire, but didn't stay around to give their names to the fire department, said Severson.

They were crew members on the four vessels that took part in the Kernel Potlatch war games on northern Vancouver Island last week. The ships left Ogden Point this morning for another three days of exercises. All are stationed in California.

Maggie 'a pigsty' for crew

By PAUL MINVIELLE

Calling crew accommodations aboard the Princess Marguerite "a real pigsty," the union representative for officers sailing aboard the old vessel has rejected another union's plea that the ship not be scrapped.

Leo Gray, business agent for the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, was reacting to union leader Neil Hindle's suggestion that the Marguerite should be saved.

Hindle is Victoria business agent for the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Blacksmiths, Forgers and Helpers. He was commenting on Transportation Minister Alex Fraser's announcement that the ship should be scrapped.

Hindle said Fraser's announcement was a betrayal to Victorians who consider the Marguerite, launched in 1948, a heritage vessel.

"I don't who Hindle's talking for," Gray said, "but it's certainly not the Canadian Merchant Service Guild."

"That ship was built in the days when, after they'd finished a ship, they said, 'Oh, where do we put the crew? Down the glory hole.' "

"I know it's a very nostalgic ship," Gray said. "It's fine to be a nostalgia and antique buff if you don't have to sail in the goddam thing."

Gray said he's sailed in some of the world's great ships, including the Queen Mary, so he has firsthand knowledge of how bad crew accommodations can be.

While he appreciates Hindle's concern for the shipbuilding industry here and unemployment, Gray's first concern is decent accommodation for his union's members.

"I'm sure he means well, but I'm sure he hasn't given any thought to conditions for the crew."

He suggested that anyone thinking of supporting any bid to save the Marguerite should first tour the crew accommodations.

The ship made its final run Monday. An overload Sunday on the return trip to Seattle resulted in several passengers being placed on the Coho and bussed to their destination from Port Angeles.

Detox centre opposition puzzle to Salvation Army

The Salvation Army said today it can't understand why merchants in the Old Town section of Victoria are opposed to the new alcoholic detoxification centre planned as part of its new $3 million headquarters on lower Yates.

Capt. William Merritt said all zoning and design requirements of city hall have been met and the project is going ahead.

"The city council has approved. The advisory panels have approved. We have the money. It looks like it's going ahead.

"We've been going at this for five years."

The newly-formed Victoria's Old Town Association met Saturday and 105 merchants signed a petition asking council to hold a public hearing on the question.

Spokesman Jim Bennett said Saturday the merchants have no quarrel with the Salvation Army.

"We are not opposed to the main part of the project, namely the new store, the warehouse complex and the residence for elderly men," he said.

"But we are concerned that the location of a treatment centre for alcoholics should not be allowed to proceed in the Old Town."

Capt. Merritt said the Salvation Army is spending more money on design for this project than on any other Army building in Canada.

"We've never put up a building or a program that has downgraded the neighborhood," he added.

He also cleared up one apprehension about the 64-bed centre — only five will be used for detoxification itself. The rest will be for men in the Army's rehabilitation program.

And he noted that while the present entrance to the treatment centre — the Harbor Light building — is at 516 Yates, between a posh French restaurant and the headquarters of the Capital Regional District, the new Harbor Light will front on Johnson Street.

Some merchants have suggested the centre be established in a rural district or in a city-owned building in another area.

"The petitioners feel city council and the city administration acted hastily and without proper forethought in the granting of a building permit for this particular project," he said.

The association doesn't want the detoxification centre to become an election issue, he said, but wants the matter aired at a public hearing.

Weathergard not involved

A Times story last week mistakenly used the name Weatherguard to identify a cellulose insulation product whose reliability had been questioned by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

The correct name of the product was Weatherwedge and there is no connnection between it and the Weathergard Shop group of insulation contractors on Vancouver Island, whose Therm-attic cellulose fibre insulation has passed CMHC specification tests.

The Weatherwedge material, manufactured by PNW Fibretex Industries Ltd. of Langley has had its acceptance fully restored by CMHC. This product is also sold in the Victoria area.

The decline was blamed on increases in interest rates announced by the Bank of Canada and commercial banks.

Trading in Asbestos Corp., which had been halted since Thursday, resumed at the opening.
